The Banner Says...

The Cloth of a Nation

by Sean Cairney

When it comes to symbols of Scotland you cannot go past the iconic 'cloth of a nation', tartan. Tartan is one of the most recognisable symbols of Scotland and is definitely something which connects people to the nation's geography, history and heritage. Like the fabric itself, tartan is woven into Scottish identity. It is something that is loved by Scots and all those that wish they were. From heritage regalia, to homewares and high end fashion it is a cloth that never has and never will go out of fashion.

According to the Scottish Register of Tartans a tartan is described as follows: 'A tartan is a design which is capable of being woven consisting of two or more alternating coloured stripes which combine vertically and horizontally to form a repeated chequered pattern.'

Highland Dress

But just how did tartan come to be and why? Researchers and historians believe tartan, or something similar to what we know of it today, has been woven by Scots for thousands of years. The earliest recorded piece of a tartan like fabric to be found in the UK was in Falkirk, dating back to the 3rd century. This ancient piece of cloth, known as the Falkirk Tartan, was found in a pot and held silver coins. It is considered one of the earliest examples of tartan material in existence and is today housed in the National Museum of Scotland in Edinburgh.

Those early renditions of tartan would not have been linked to Clans or families but would have used the basic colours available found locally and it became especially popular in the Scottish Highlands. By the 16th and 17th centuries weaving wools and dyes was much more common and it became part of Highland dress.

On April 16th 1746 at Culloden Moor, just outside of Inverness and in less than an hour, Bonnie Prince Charlie lost the Battle of Culloden and King George II and the Hanoverian government used the opportunity to destroy the perceived military threat of the savage Jacobite Highland clans who supported the return of the Stuart dynasty. The government's intention was to eliminate the culturally separate identity of the Highland people, and their way of life. The Royal Dress Act of 1746, which was introduced several months after the Battle of Culloden, restricted the wearing of Highland dress. The law would not be repealed until July 1st, 1782.

In this issue

Tartan has now for over 200 years been woven into the fabric of Scottish culture and symbolism. The stunning V&A Dundee this month will launch the much-anticipated exhibition Tartan on Dundee's renewed waterfront. For Scottish Banner readers the great news is if you happen to be travelling to Scotland this year, or into early next year, you can take in this exhibition of one of the world's most recognisable textiles and patterns, and the first exhibition in Scotland in 30 years to focus solely on tartan.

Scotland is a great country for taking in local statues. There is always one around with a story to tell. However, we may need to remind ourselves not all statues displayed are in fact a tribute to real people. Fictional characters also get to be remembered across the country from poetry, children's books and cartoons.

Making some of these loved works and characters, adored by generations of people, quite literally set in stone.

The first time I ever flew to Scotland I landed at Glasgow Prestwick Airport. As a young child it was all so exciting to be somewhere new and coming into land over the green Ayrshire countryside. Glasgow Prestwick has a huge history with Scottish aviation and whilst the airport today is not the gateway and transatlantic hub it once was, the Scottish aviators that used Prestwick made their mark on the industry at both home and beyond.

Tartan Day

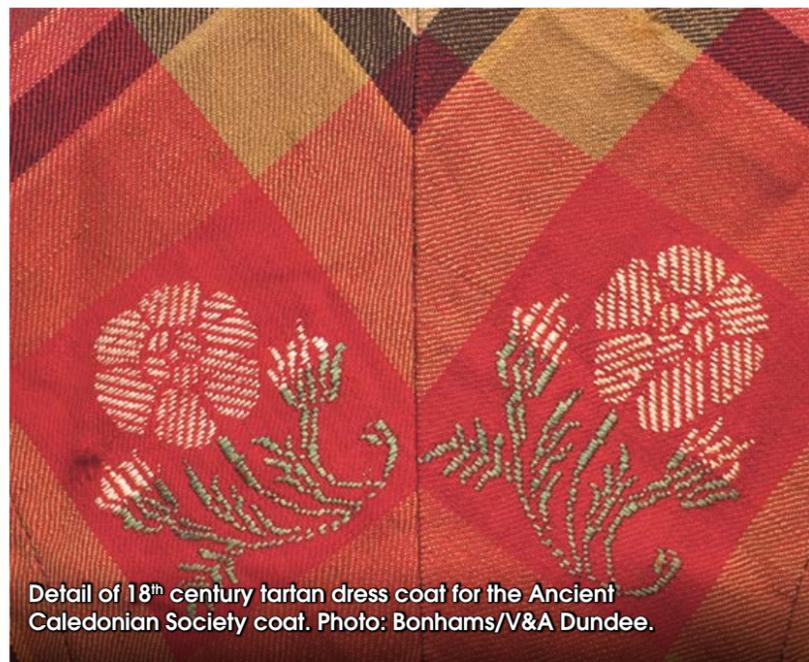

For hundreds of years people have been able to freely wear tartan across Scotland and a tartan industry has flourished (said to be worth over £350 million a year). There are now thousands of registered tartans which cover everything from personal, company, clan, milestones and more. Tartans are available in a plethora of colours and styles from kilts to carpets. I suspect many Scottish Banner readers will own some tartan and likely in their family or Clan colours. Tartan is loved by both Scots and non-Scots, making it an international timeless fashion statement.

This month across North America Tartan Day will be celebrated on April 6th (in Australia and New Zealand International Tartan Day takes place on July 1st, which marks the anniversary of the repeal of the 1746 Act of Proscription that banned the wearing of tartan). The day started in Nova Scotia, Canada by a reader of the Scottish Banner and has grown into a huge continental celebration and is recognised by governments across Canada, the US and Scotland itself. I hope those who are attending the many events taking place have a wonderful time and proudly wear their tartan as it, like Scots themselves, will never go out of style. 🍷

Declaration of Arbroath to go on display

The Declaration of Arbroath will be displayed at the National Museum of Scotland this summer for the first time in 18 years. The display has been organised in partnership between National Museums Scotland and National Records of Scotland, who are custodians of the document. The famous document will be on show from 3 June to 2 July 2023. The document has not been on public display for 18 years, when it was last displayed at the Scottish Parliament. The iconic and fragile 700-year-old document, which is cared for and preserved for future generations by National Records of Scotland, can only be displayed occasionally in order to ensure its long-term preservation. The Declaration was initially due to be displayed in April 2020 to coincide with its 700th anniversary, but this had to be postponed due to the pandemic. The new summer date has been chosen to give as many people as possible the rare chance to see one of Scotland's most important historical documents.

The Declaration of Arbroath is a letter dated 6 April 1320, written by the barons and freeholders of Scotland, on behalf of the Kingdom of Scotland, to Pope John XXII asking him to recognise Scotland's independence and acknowledge Robert the Bruce as the country's lawful king.

The letter also asks the Pontiff to persuade King Edward II of England to end hostilities against the Scots, so that their energy may be better used to secure the frontiers of Christendom. The Declaration was probably drafted at a meeting of the King and his council at Newbattle, then written up in the scriptorium of Arbroath Abbey. Written in Latin, it was sealed by eight earls and about forty barons. It was authenticated by seals, as documents at that time were not signed. Only 19 seals now remain.

Of great historic and cultural interest

Alice Blackwell, Senior Curator of Medieval Archaeology and History at National Museums Scotland said: "We are delighted to have the opportunity to display the Declaration of Arbroath here at the National Museum of Scotland. It is a hugely significant document and a vital piece of Scotland's history. We look forward to welcoming many visitors to enjoy the rare opportunity of seeing this iconic document close up."

Culture Secretary, Angus Robertson said: "The Declaration of Arbroath is of great historic and cultural interest to Scots and people around the world of Scottish descent. The display of this iconic document will give people from across Scotland and further afield a wonderful opportunity to visit the museum and see this important piece of history for themselves."

Laura Mitchell, Deputy Keeper, National Records of Scotland, said: "The Declaration of Arbroath is a key treasure in our extensive collections and we are proud of the role we play in conserving this significant historical artefact for future generations. The display will allow Scots and visitors from further afield to see this famous document for the first time in 18 years."

The Declaration was written during the long Wars of Independence with England when, despite the Scots' success at the Battle of Bannockburn, Robert I had not been recognised as king by either Edward II or by the Pope, and had been excommunicated by the latter. At this time, the Pope desired peace between England and Scotland, so both could help in a crusade to the Holy Land. The Declaration sought to influence him by offering the possibility of support from the Scots for his long-desired crusade if they no longer had to fear English invasion. After receiving the Declaration, the Pope urged reconciliation between the warring sides and a truce was agreed in 1323. A peace treaty was signed between England and Scotland in March 1328 and the following year the Pope issued a papal bull permitting the anointing and crowning of a King of Scots. The peace was short-lived, however, as the Second War of Independence broke out in 1332 and went on for twenty-five years.

The Declaration of Arbroath will be on display at the National Museum of Scotland in Edinburgh Saturday June 3 to Sunday 2 July 2023. Admission Free. For details see: www.nms.ac.uk/declaration

Tartan of the Month

The Golden Retriever Club of Scotland Tartan

The Scottish Banner is pleased to be offering the Tartan of the Month series highlighting a variety of different, unique and colourful tartans from around the world which are registered with the Scottish Register of Tartans in Edinburgh. The Scottish Register of Tartans was established by an act of the Scottish Parliament in November 2008 and promotes and preserves information about historic and contemporary tartans from Scotland and throughout the world. Text and image use are courtesy of the Scottish Register of Tartans (SRT).

The colours chosen are intended to represent primarily the gold colour of the dog and its purpose of retrieving game from varied landscapes and water, hence the green, blue and heather. These colours reflect the landscape of its origin and its Scottish heritage and produce a design that is intended to be used to enhance the Club's worldwide standing. This tartan (SRT reference: 13815) was designed by Lochcarron of Scotland and registered in February, 2023.

Ever wanted to know what happened to your old pal from home, how to make your favourite Scottish meal, or wondered about a certain bit of Scottish history?

The Waters o' Dee

There are beautiful rivers in Britain,
And grander by far o'er the sea,
But my heart flies to rest like a bird to its nest near the beautiful waters of Dee.

It flows by the heather clad mountain,
And gurgles its way to the sea,
Its music so sweet
Often lulled me to sleep
Oh, beautiful river of Dee.

Though far from my home I may wander
To lands that lie over the sea,
My thoughts will return
And my heart will still yearn
For a sight of that river of Dee.

Oft on its banks I have wandered
With the one who was dearest to me,
Now she lies asleep
While my vigil I keep
Near my beautiful river of Dee.

Author Unknown.

I found this poem in my uncle's belongings and thought it would be appreciated by Scottish Banner readers.

Our family is from various parts of Aberdeenshire and the River Dee is loved by all the family. The name Dee comes from the Roman word Deva, which means goddess.

Keep up the great work of the Scottish Banner.

Drum Castle 700th anniversary

Thank you for the lovely article in the December issue about RRS Discovery and Discovery Point. What makes this article about Discovery special is that Lieutenant William Robinson Colbeck was the grandfather of Alexander Irvine, 27th Baron of Drum, and the Patron of Clan Irwin Association. He was Second Officer and Navigator on this ship when it sailed both voyages of the BANZARE Antarctic Expedition of 1929-1931. (For more information click here: <https://www.antarctica.gov.au/about-antarctica/history/exploration-and-expeditions/banzare-1929-31/>) He was a son of famous Captain William Colbeck (1871-1930) great grandfather of Alexander Irvine, an Englishman and an Antarctic Explorer, Seaman and Ship's Captain

William Colbeck Senior served firstly in the Merchant Navy. However, in 1889 he was awarded a Navy Reserve commission and joined Norwegian Carsten Egeberg Borchgrevink on the 'Southern Cross Expedition' to the Antarctic. Next, he went south to the Antarctic in Command on the Morning to resupply Captain Robert Falcon Scott's Discovery trapped in the ice at McMurdo Sound. In 1904 he was again the Captain on the Morning going south to the Antarctic with Scott still trapped in the ice. There was a fortunate result however when the ice conditions shifted and the Discovery was freed.

There are some artifacts that have been donated to this prominent attraction by Carolyn Colbeck Irvine, daughter of Lieutenant Colbeck and mother of Alexander Irvine, Chief of the Name and Arms of Clan Irvine and 27th Baron of Drum.

2023 marks the 700th anniversary of Drum Castle being given to Clan Irvine by King Robert the Bruce, along with 10,000 acres of the Royal Forest. Clan Irwin Association is sponsoring a trip to Scotland to participate in the 700th anniversary celebration of Drum Castle. We will visit Discovery and Discovery Point where we will have a guided tour by Chief Alexander Irvine.

There will be some celebratory activities the first week of August in Aberdeenshire leading up to the Aboyne Highland Games on August 5. In addition, the Burnett Clan, neighbors and good friends of the Irvines, is celebrating 700 years of Crathes Castle.

A Brewing Storm: Alewives in sixteenth-century Inverness

A recording of our January Zoom Talk (with a very lively Q&A session) has now been posted on YouTube and can be accessed here: <https://youtu.be/ofa-gIjd0gk>.

The talk, A Brewing Storm: Alewives in sixteenth-century Inverness by Dr. Elizabeth Ewan, looks at the lives of the brewsters and alewives as they appeared in the surviving town court records of Inverness, 1556-86, and examines what they can reveal more generally about women's contributions to urban society. It describes the colourful life of Elspeth Barnet, a domestic servant who went on to spend her adult life in the brewing trade.

From earning her living and breaking the rules while doing so, brawling with customers and other townspeople, assisting other brewsters, supporting her husband when he also got into trouble, and even being banished from the town on occasion, Elspeth Barnet demonstrates the assertiveness and agency of women in early modern Scottish towns.

Caldwell House

I really enjoy reading the Scottish Banner each month. I have been waiting to read about places in Ayrshire like museums, castles and places. My great-grandfather Francis Earnest Power was born November 19, 1865 at Cardwell House in Ayrshire, Scotland. He died October 24, 1944 at Fairview Mullum Road in Ringwood, Victoria. I would appreciate any information on Caldwell House.

St. Michaels, Linlithgow

It was with great interest that my wife and I read your article on the spire of St. Michael's Church in Linlithgow (Crown of thorns-Saving the iconic symbol of Linlithgow, the Scottish Banner, February, 2023). We were both christened there (unfortunately not in the same font as Mary Queen of Scots) in 1939, met again first day at high school, and have been together ever since.

We have a most beautiful tapestry of the stained glass window in St. Katherine's aisle, done by a friend from Linlithgow. Having left for Australia in 1961, we did not see the "new" spire until our first visit home....mixed feelings at first, but after several visits we have become accustomed to it.

We wish the Aspire Campaign every success, and hope that their efforts bear fruit.

Plan to save the birthplace of Auld Lang Syne

New generation of artists can draw inspiration from home built by poet Robert Burns.

Plans to save the only farm built by the poet Robert Burns have been unveiled. The “FutureVision” seeks to safeguard the 170-acre Ellisland Farm, on the banks of the River Nith, where Burns wrote Auld Lang Syne, Tam o’ Shanter and a large part of his creative output, especially in music and song.

Artistic residencies in the farm buildings and off grid will allow a new generation of artists, musicians and song-writers to be inspired by the rural landscape that Burns described as “sweet poetic ground.” The new accommodation is modelled on The Hermitage, a tiny bothy on the neighbouring Friars Carse estate where Burns would escape to write. The plans are focussed on “Conservation through Use” meaning community, heritage and education events are subsidised by other activity such as visitor accommodation, event hire and creative retreats. The farmhouse, which he created in 1788 for his young wife Jean Armour, will become an immersive space where visitors can experience their domestic life. Workshops and performances will be held in his farm buildings which will be restored sensitively.

Sweet poetic ground

New planting will improve bio-diversity in the woodlands and fields laid out as part of Burns’ tenancy and pathways will improve accessibility and include interpretation by artists. A new visitor centre will complement the tradition buildings. The newbuild will offer catering, audio visual experiences and an exhibition space to safely display items from Ellisland’s collection, including manuscripts and Burns’ possessions such as his flute, books and fishing rod.

Joan McAlpine, Business Development Manager of the Robert Burns Ellisland Trust, said as an independent charity the trust had pursued ‘Conservation through Use’ so that Ellisland could be financially sustainable. She said: “These proposals will bring Ellisland alive by enabling new generations to be inspired as Burns was inspired by what he called the ‘sweet poetic ground’ on the Banks of the Nith. We believe people will want to come from all over the world to immerse themselves in the landscape which inspired Auld Lang Syne, Ye Banks and Braes, John Anderson and many more songs. Since our charity took over the site, we have built on the “intangible cultural heritage” opportunities offered by Ellisland, with traditional youth concerts, Scottish Halloween and Hogmanay celebrations and workshops on everything from butter-making to Scots Language. To do this sustainably and to reach more people we must improve our facilities and create new income streams.”

Dr David Hopes, Acting Chair of the Robert Burns Ellisland Trust, who is a former Director of the Robert Burns Birthplace Museum in Alloway and is currently Director of Leeds Museums and Galleries said: “Ellisland is the place to fall in love with Burns and see nature through the poet’s eyes. These plans mean we will preserve and enhance the landscape which inspired Burns by improving bio-diversity and enhancing accessibility. There will be opportunities to do that working with partners in the community. Ellisland’s Conservation Management Plan, funded by Historic Environment Scotland and published last year, identified the site as being of ‘exceptional significance’ but said it was at risk unless extensive repairs were carried out. These plans will save the buildings by conserving them through use, safeguard the important collection and allow many more people to enjoy the site and benefit from it.”

Celebrating Shakespeare’s First Folio across Scotland

This year is the 400th birthday of the First Folio, the first printed edition of William Shakespeare’s collected plays. As part of the UK and Ireland Folio400 celebrations, three copies in Scottish collections will go on public display throughout 2023.

The University of Glasgow’s First Folio. Photo: Martin Shields.

The Scottish held copies that will be accessible to the public in 2023 are at the University of Glasgow, the National Library of Scotland and Mount Stuart Trust. Only 18 of Shakespeare’s plays appeared in print during his lifetime, and some of these were in corrupt or pirated editions. The First Folio collection contains 36 plays, 18 of which were here published for the first time, thus saving such works as The Tempest and Macbeth from probable extinction. About 750 copies of the 1623 First Folio were printed. 235 are known to have survived with 50 copies still in the UK, 149 in USA and 36 in other corners of the world (nine of which are listed as ‘missing’).

A monument to the enduring power of literature

Professor Adrian Streete, Head of English Literature at the University of Glasgow, said: “Today the First Folio is a literary and cultural monument, as several of those involved in collecting and printing Shakespeare’s plays four hundred years ago hoped it would be. Yet in 1623, the publishing of the First Folio was an expensive and risky undertaking. Shakespeare’s popularity was not then what it would become later. The story of how Mr. William Shakespeares Comedies, Histories, & Tragedies became the First Folio is a long and complicated one, bound up with shifting ideas of literary prestige, the theatre, and national identity. But the First Folio remains a monument to the enduring power of literature to help us make sense of ourselves and others, and to imagine new and better worlds.”

The Scottish books are three different folios, in three very different collections, with three different stories to tell. The National Library of Scotland’s Head of Rare Books, Maps and Music, Helen Vincent said: “We’ve seen everyone from school children to actors to researchers fascinated by the First Folio and the stories it contains, so we’re looking forward to bringing it to a wide audience in our Treasures exhibition. It will be on display for the actual birthday of the book in November – the month it was first offered for sale in 1623. I’m sure the people who put such effort into producing this book would love to know that 400 years later, their dedication to preserving and sharing all of Shakespeare’s plays continues to have such a profound impact on culture in all its forms.”

Folio400 aims to arrange, encourage and promote an array of shows to celebrate the 400th birthday of the First Folio, the first printed edition of Shakespeare’s collected plays, in 2023. Folio Day, the 23 April 2023, Shakespeare’s birthday, will launch the Folio Season. Institutional and Private First Folio owners will make their copies available to the public across the UK and Ireland including the three Scottish institutions. For more information on Folio400 see: www.folio400.com

Scotspeak is a selection of quotes which made headlines in Scotland last month on a variety of current Scottish affairs.

“These trees and woodlands have histories that stretch back hundreds or, in the case of the Black Woods of Rannoch, thousands of years. They connect us with our past and I am delighted to present the plaques on behalf of our Late Queen. Historic woodlands and trees like these, and the new trees planted across Perth and Kinross as part of the Queen’s Green Canopy, are a big part of why Perth and Kinross is such a beautiful place to live and visit.”

Deputy Lieutenant of Perth and Kinross Alex Cairncross said the historic roots of Perth and Kinross are being celebrated as part of a network of ancient Woodlands and Trees created to mark the late Queen’s Platinum Jubilee. The Ancient Canopy sees 70 ancient woodlands and 70 ancient trees dedicated to Her Majesty as part of the celebrations marking the Queen’s 70 years on the throne. Perth and Kinross, also known as Big Tree Country, has had four ancient trees or woodlands recognised as part of the nationwide programme.

“Following a renewed drive to attract additional volunteers; trustees and members proving unsuccessful - and the inflation driven increases in costs, the Board of Trustees of The Royal Burgh of Dumfries Tattoo have taken the hard decision to announce their intention to wind up the charity.”

The Trustees of Dumfries Tattoo said that the bi-annual Tattoo will cease. Founded in 2008, the Royal Burgh of Dumfries Tattoo had grown from a small community affair - to one of the South of Scotland’s ‘Must See’ events. The last Tattoo took place in 2022.

“Remembering those who lost their lives is an important part of showing our respect for their lives, and part of the grieving process for our communities. We recognise especially the missed opportunities for life of the children and young people. We also remember the many people who came to the rescue of the ailing vessel – the RAF aircraft, Merchant ships, and of course the local lifeboat crews.”

Councillor Linda Dorward, Depute Convenor of Dumfries and Galloway Council said at the recent commemoration of the 70th anniversary of the sinking of MV Princess Victoria. The MV Princess Victoria was travelling from Stranraer, Scotland to Northern Ireland on January 31, 1953. The vessel sank in the North Channel with 133 people losing their lives. The loss of the MV Princess Victoria is considered to be the worst peacetime maritime disaster to occur in British coastal waters.

“Having stated in October that the existing Caledonian Sleeper franchise would come to an end in June 2023, I want to give rail staff and passengers as much certainty as I can about the future. With the Sleeper franchise ending on 25 June 2023, we have carefully assessed the options for successor arrangements in accordance with the current legislative framework and our Franchising Policy Statement. This decision has been taken following a detailed analysis of the options available, and in accordance with the current UK legislative framework and the Scottish Ministers’ Franchising Policy Statement. Having regard to continuing uncertainty regarding market conditions, travel behaviours and ongoing UK rail reform, it was decided that a Direct Award was not viable and that Sleeper services should instead be provided by the Scottish Government in line with their Operator of Last Resort duty. That is why I have confirmed that, from the expiry of the current franchise, Caledonian Sleeper services will be provided through Scottish Rail Holdings, a company wholly-owned and controlled by the Scottish Government. This approach will provide a stable platform for Sleeper services and certainty for passengers and staff.”

Scottish Minister for Transport Jenny Gilruth announced that from 25 June 2023, Caledonian Sleeper services will be nationalised and provided by an arm’s length company owned and controlled by the Scottish Government in line with the Government’s statutory Operator of Last Resort duty. The prestigious Caledonian Sleeper Lowland Route runs between Glasgow Central or Edinburgh Waverley and the Highlander Route departs from Aberdeen, Inverness and Fort William to London Euston.

“It is vital that we continue to support displaced people from Ukraine for as long as they need help. While I hope those of you who want to return to Ukraine can do so safely when you can, my message to those seeking sanctuary remains clear: Scotland is your home for as long as you need it to be. Slava Ukraini.”

First Minister Nicola Sturgeon said when she issued an open letter to Ukrainians in Scotland and across the world on the one-year anniversary of Russia’s invasion of Ukraine. Since war broke out in Ukraine, Scotland has welcomed more than 21,000 people fleeing the conflict.

“Stobs Camp is an outstanding monument to Scotland’s role in the two great conflicts of the 20th century. It gives us a unique insight into the experience of those involved in these conflicts; those that served in the British military, civilian internees and prisoners of war. Designating a site as a scheduled monument is a way through which we can recognise and celebrate what makes this heritage special, along with ensuring it’s protected for future generations. We’re keen that the people have an opportunity to have their say as a part of this process and encouraging anyone with an interest in Stobs Camp to take part in our consultation.”

Dara Parsons, Head of Designations at Historic Environment Scotland (HES), said a historic military training camp could soon have its key features recognised as scheduled monuments as HES announced it is seeking views from the public on proposals to designate Stobs Camp in recognition of its national importance. The Stobs Estate was originally purchased by the War Office in 1902, with the aim of having a permanent training base and barracks for one of the Army Corps. Within months of its creation, nearly 20,000 troops had been through the camp and Stobs was dubbed ‘Scotland’s Aldershot’. The remains of the camp include: First World War training trenches and firing ranges, and a Second World War tracked target range for tanks that is unique to Scotland. Stobs is also home to the last surviving example of a First World War prisoner of war accommodation hut, that is still in its original location, in the UK.

Lady MacGregor's Scotland By: Lady Fiona MacGregor

Lady MacGregor of MacGregor – otherwise known as British writer and broadcaster Fiona Armstrong - works for ITV news and current affairs. Fiona's husband is the Chief of Clan Gregor, Sir Malcolm MacGregor of MacGregor. She is an active member of Clan Armstrong, so their lives are interwoven with all things tartan. The couple live in the Scottish Borderlands, although filming and writing takes Fiona all over Scotland.

MacMillan's Cross.

Medieval gravestones.

The other night it was minus 15 in Achnaharra in Sutherland. Mind, that is not over the top for the Highlands. The clue is in the name – high lands - and this tiny village once saw Scotland's lowest recorded temperature of minus 27.2. It is nothing compared to the world's lowest temperature of minus 89.22 - recorded in summer at Vostok, Antarctica - but for Scotland it is still frost-bitingly cold.

Highland gem

Yet when summer and autumn come, Achnaharra is a much more welcoming spot. This small community sits on an old drovers' road. One once used by crofters to take their sheep and cattle to market. Achnaharra once boasted a drovers' inn. Today there is a smart, but traditional hotel. With trout-filled lochs all around, it is a mecca for anglers and walkers. It also has a small, unmanned weather station. Which is why temperatures are so carefully recorded. Achnaharra is on my 'must see' list. And this month the chief and I tick off another Highland gem. We drive up to the west coast. To Argyll, where the rain is relentless, and Loch Fyne is long, dark and full.

Someone once told me that Scotland is at its best seen in the rain. So, wrapped in waterproofs we set off to visit nearby Castle Sween. Built in the late twelfth century, this ruin on the edge of a sea loch is said to be Scotland's oldest standing mainland castle. And what a lookout this menacing ancient pile must have been when trying to guard against sea invaders. The stone walls thick and towering. Water on one side, a hill on the other...

Castle Sween has links to the MacDonalds, Lords of the Isles. But it was originally a stronghold of Clan MacSween, some of whose descendants would migrate across the sea to Ireland. 'MacSween' is not a very common Scottish name, but when I hear it, I think of food. Because MacSweens are a famous Edinburgh butchers. This is a firm that started making haggis and black pudding back in the 1950s and now sell all over the world. In the past the company has hit the headlines by producing the world's most expensive haggis – a mix of Scottish wagyu beef and white French truffles. Today they make more affordable versions, including vegetarian and vegan haggis – and even gluten free haggis. You can check out their website where there are some terrific recipes.

A treasure trove of antiquity

But I digress. Back to our Argyll trip. After the castle, it is on to tiny Killmory Knap Chapel. An ancient place of worship that houses a treasure trove of antiquity. There in the medieval church are dozens of gravestones, variously carved with knights in armour, swords, flowers, and animals. The centrepiece is the fantastically preserved MacMillan's Cross; some eight feet high and inlaid with religious and hunting scenes. It is the work of age-old master masons. Considering the sort of tools they must have had in those days the skill is greatly to be admired. It is a culture blast from the past. And we are reminded that Argyll is serious clan territory.

Here were not just the Lords of the Isles, the mighty MacDonalds: motto 'By Sea and by Land'. Here were the all-powerful Campbells: their watchword, 'Forget Not'... With history all around we are reminded that this is Big Boy country - and a MacGregor and an Armstrong should watch their step. And we do. These days I am moving much more cautiously. Because the last time I was in the Highlands you may remember I slipped and broke my elbow. Dusk is falling. It is still raining, and we can just about look across the sea to the island of Jura. And there we are - more water. Then it is Argyll.

At least the food is fabulous. One night at the hotel, we eat venison with a blackberry sauce. The next a bowl of local langoustine come cooked in garlic and butter. Yes, you can forget your fancy French food. You can forgo the delicious Italian pasta and pizza. Or the moreish Spanish paella. Here in the Highlands, it may be wet, but it is Scotland's Larder at its best.

Roddy MacLeod MBE to perform at the 118th Maclean Highland Gathering

The Maclean Highland Games have secured the services of world-renowned piper, Roddy MacLeod MBE as their International Guest Piper for the 118th Maclean Highland Gathering on Easter Weekend Friday 7 and Saturday 8 April 2023. Chief Peter Smith of the Lower Clarence Scottish Association said, "We are excited to have a piper of such high standing join us for our event. The Lower Clarence Scottish Association is dedicated to preserving and promoting the Scottish culture. Roddy MacLeod is considered one of the most accomplished pipers of his generation and it's great that we can give our local community and the wider piping community, the opportunity to hear someone of this calibre play and to also adjudicate at our solo and pipe band competitions".

Highly regarded teacher, recitalist and adjudicator

Roddy MacLeod MBE, Glasgow, Scotland is a highly regarded teacher, recitalist and adjudicator. Uniquely, he is a Grade 1 Championship winning Pipe Major and a five-time Glenfiddich World Solo Piping Champion and in 2012 he was inducted into the Scottish Traditional Music Awards Hall of Fame.

He has won the Glenfiddich Piping Championship five times, winning the MSR three times and the piobaireachd event a record ten times, the Silver Chanter seven times, the Northern Meeting Clasp on two occasions, Bi-centenary medal (1988) and Former Winners MSR, the Senior Piobaireachd at the Argyllshire Gathering twice and the Former Winner MSR twice. At the Scottish Piping Society of London Championship, he has won the Bratach Gorm eight times, the Gillies Cup Open Piobaireachd nine times, the Former Winners London Medallion MSR five times and the Overall Championship eight times. He continues to be a dynamic and exceptionally successful competitor. He is internationally esteemed as a teacher, adjudicator and recitalist and, for more than 20 years, his warm, strong sounding 100 year-old Lawrie pipes have given immense pleasure to audiences around the world.

In addition to his solo piping, he developed his interest in pipe bands from a young age and played with the Red Hackle and British Caledonian Airways Pipe Bands, the last of which became the Scottish Power Pipe Band. In 1995, Roddy MacLeod became its Pipe Major and, over the next decade, led it to over 45 Grade 1 Championship prizes including the Cowal Championships and All Ireland Championships. Roddy will perform a recital on Saturday 8th April at the Maclean Civic Hall from 8.00 pm. Entry is free.

The Reivers: The Story of the Border Reivers

Only one period in history is immediately, indelibly and uniquely linked to the whole area of the Scottish and English Border country, and that is the time of the Reivers. Whenever anyone mentions 'Reiver?', no-one hesitates to add 'Border?'. It is an inextricable association, and rightly so. Nowhere else in Britain in the modern era, or indeed in Europe, did civil order break down over such a wide area, or for such a long time. This book tells the remarkable story of the Reivers and how they made the Borders.

The Makers of Scotland: Picts, Romans, Gaels and Vikings

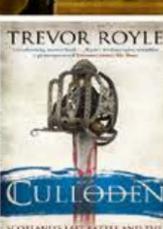

During the 1st millennium AD the most northerly part of Britain evolved into the country known as Scotland. The transition was a long process of social & political change driven by the ambitions of warlords. At first these men were tribal chiefs, Roman generals or rulers of small kingdoms. Later the initiative was seized by dynamic warrior-kings who campaigned far beyond their own borders. Armies of Picts, Scots, Vikings, Britons and Anglo-Saxons fought each other for supremacy. In this book the remarkable story of how ancient North Britain became the medieval kingdom of Scotland is told.

The Highland Clearances

The Highland Clearances stands out as one of the most emotive chapters in the history of Scotland. This book traces the origins of the Clearances from the eighteenth century to their culmination in the crofting legislation of the 1880s. In considering both the terrible suffering of the Highland people as well as the stark choices that faced landowners during a period of rapid economic change, it shows how the Clearances were one of many 'attempted' solutions to the problem of how to maintain a population on marginal and infertile land. This book offers a balanced analysis of events which created a terrible scar on the Highland and Gaelic imagination.

The Perfect Sword: Forging the Dark Ages

In 2000, archaeologist Paul Gething rediscovered a sword. This is the story of that sword: how and why it was made, who made it and what it meant to the warriors and kings who wielded it for three centuries. It is also the story of the archaeologists and swordsmiths who found, studied and attempted to recreate the sword using only the materials and technologies available to the smith who first made it. The result is a remarkable journey into the life and items of a seminal but little documented period of history when the foundations for what would become England, Wales and Scotland were laid.

Nation celebrates 100 years of Flying Scotsman, world's most famous steam locomotive

Friday 24 February 2023, marked 100 years since Flying Scotsman, the world's most famous steam locomotive, set off on its first journey from the sheds at Doncaster Works. Now a national treasure, Flying Scotsman is a star attraction in the collection of the National Railway Museum (part of the Science Museum Group) in York, where it is a working museum exhibit. In a new poem released, The Making of Flying Scotsman, UK Poet Laureate Simon Armitage has paid homage to the celebrity engine, a feat of British design and engineering which has inspired a love of rail in generations of families and become synonymous with the golden age of rail travel. Commenting on the inspiration behind his new work, Simon Armitage said: "Flying Scotsman is a poem. I just had to write it down." The Making of Flying Scotsman is now on display as part of Flying Scotsman: 100 Years, 100 Voices, a new exhibition at the National Railway Museum, which launched in February and showcases the legacy of the locomotive through the lives it has touched.

In its latest excursion, following a new lick of paint, Flying Scotsman surprised travellers at Edinburgh Waverley station where it made a fleeting appearance. To mark the occasion, Simon Armitage read The Making of Flying Scotsman whilst dancers from the Royal Scottish Country Dance Society performed The Flying Scotsman, devised by Hugh Thurston in 1966. The event was rounded off with a performance from Celtic rock band, the Red Hot Chilli Pipers. Also announced are a series of new Scottish events, including two main line excursions and a heritage railway visit.

Designed by Sir Nigel Gresley, Flying Scotsman was the first locomotive of the newly formed LNER (London and North Eastern Railway) and originally numbered 1472. It was given its name in 1924 after the daily 10.00 London King's Cross to Edinburgh Waverley rail service. The locomotive went on to operate in service until 1963 and later in preservation, which included tours of the USA, Canada and Australia, where it captured the hearts of millions. In 2004, a campaign spearheaded by the National Railway Museum to save the locomotive for the nation amassed the support of thousands, confirming its status as a national treasure. The appeal to keep the steam icon in Britain was supported by a £1.8 million grant from the National Heritage Memorial Fund and the generosity of the public. Its restoration was also completed with the help of a Heritage Lottery Fund grant of £275,000.

The most famous steam locomotive in the world

Those unable to see the locomotive on its centenary tour have the opportunity to experience Flying Scotsman through exhibitions including Flying Scotsman: 100 Years, 100 Voices, Flying Scotsman VR and with collectible memorabilia available from the Science Museum shop. Highlights include a Flying Scotsman centenary train set, a £2 coin from The Royal Mint, featuring Flying Scotsman in vivid colour—a rarity on £2 coins, with the last coloured £2 coin released over 20 years ago and a new children's book by bestselling author Michael Morpurgo: Flying Scotsman and the Best Birthday Ever, which tells the story of a little girl called Iris who dreams of being a train driver when she grows up.

Judith McNicol, Director of the National Railway Museum, said: "Edinburgh Waverley is a fitting location to mark the centenary of the world's most famous express passenger locomotive. It was here that Flying Scotsman completed its record-breaking, non-stop journey between London and Edinburgh in 1928 and Edinburgh is also the birthplace of Sir Nigel Gresley, Flying Scotsman's designer. Today, Flying Scotsman is an undoubted star of the National Railway Museum's collection and is recognised around the world as a triumph of British ingenuity and engineering. Flying Scotsman will now spend the rest of the year travelling across the country to give people the chance to see the engine for themselves and to take part in this special anniversary, from free static displays to rail tours to the Centenary Festival at Locomotion."

Alex Hynes, Managing Director of Scotland's Railway, continued: "Edinburgh Waverley was honoured to host a visit from Flying Scotsman on such a special occasion and our team has pulled out all the stops for this special occasion. The most famous steam locomotive in the world always draws a crowd. Visitors to Princes Street Gardens, just across the road from Waverley, will see a familiar Flying Scotsman theme when the world's oldest Floral Clock blooms later this year too. Make sure to pop in to see it while on your way to the station."

Flying Scotsman was built in Doncaster in February 1923, as an A1 class locomotive for the newly formed LNER and converted to an A3 class in 1947. It was the first locomotive of the newly formed LNER (London and North Eastern Railway). Designed by Sir Nigel Gresley and numbered 1472, the locomotive was not named Flying Scotsman until the following year when it was picked to attend the British Empire Exhibition in London and renumbered 4472. Today the locomotive is owned by the National Railway Museum in York and is operated and maintained by Riley & Son (E) Ltd, based in Heywood, Greater Manchester.

Islands Growth Deal worth £335 million signed

An agreement to invest £100 million in the future economic prosperity of Orkney, Shetland and the Outer Hebrides has been signed in Orkney by UK and Scottish Government Ministers and the Council Leaders of the three island groups. Up to 1,300 jobs and £393 million of investment is anticipated to result from the signing of the transformative Islands Growth Deal between UK Government, Scottish Government, Comhairle nan Eilean Siar, Shetland Islands Council, and Orkney Islands Council. Over a ten-year period, the Islands Growth Deal will invest in 16 projects and programmes that capitalise on the Islands' unique assets. These are built around three strategic themes of low carbon, supporting growth and future industries, and thriving sustainable communities, subject to approval of Full Business Cases.

Jointly funded by up to £100 million - £50 million from each of the Scottish and UK Governments - the Islands Growth Deal will attract further investment of up to £293 million in match funding. The Deal has been developed by the three island Councils, together with public, academic, business, community and third sector partners. The first year of the ten-year programme is anticipated to see investment across the islands, including in University of the Highlands and Islands campuses in Shetland and the Outer Hebrides, and the pan-island Islands Centre for Net Zero, which will be based at the Orkney Research and Innovation Campus in Stromness.

Following the signing within Orkney Islands Council's chamber, UK Government Minister for Scotland Malcolm Offord said: "This will not just boost local economies and create jobs, but also empower communities to get the most out of the many assets and attributes that make the islands such unique and special places to live. This deal is packed with a broad range of high-impact projects, whether it's leading the transition to net zero or developing 'must-visit' destinations such as the St Kilda trail. The UK Government's £50m support for the Islands deal, in addition to other levelling up investments, shows our continued commitment to the Scottish Islands."

Scottish Government Business Minister Ivan McKee said: "This Growth Deal will be a game-changing initiative for our islands - enabling sustainable economic growth and delivering new and internationally significant port infrastructure that will play an important role in achieving net zero targets. This £50 million Scottish Government investment will support the transition to renewable energy sources - including equipping the workforce with new skills - and trial emissions reduction initiatives on islands. It will drive innovation in key space, food and drink and creative industries sectors; help develop significant tourism and cultural attractions and expand education provision. We are determined that our islands should be attractive places to live and work and are able to maximise their contribution to Scotland's sustainable economic transformation."

National treasure HMS Unicorn reopens

National treasure HMS Unicorn has reopened to the public following an extensive period of closure, which has enabled the popular Dundee docked museum and visitor attraction to undergo urgent roof repairs, costing in excess of £100,000. The urgent repair work, which required a temporary steel roof to be installed on Scotland's oldest ship to ensure it is kept wind and watertight for five years until it can be treated properly.

The Unicorn Preservation Society, the charitable trust behind Scotland's oldest ship, is marking the re-opening by offering free self-guided visits for school groups over the next six months. HMS Unicorn offers an engaging experience for pupils, and with a school's programme designed to support Curriculum for Excellence the ship provides the opportunity for pupils to explore their heritage by immersing themselves in 200 years of history and discovering what life was like on board. The ship recently received a generous donation of £100,000 to help fund the much-needed restoration of the ship. The donation amounts to 10% of the total £1 million financial investment needed for immediate conservation repairs to HMS Unicorn and will go specifically towards the replacement of missing or rotten timbers and engineering works to strengthen the ship's weakest points. The work will be completed in advance of the ship being moved to dry dock,

East Graving Dock in Dundee, for major conservation works, as part of Project Safe Haven. Project Safe Haven will see HMS Unicorn forming the centre piece of the new Dundee Maritime Heritage Centre. Museum Director, Matthew Bellhouse Moran, said: "We're looking forward to welcoming visitors back to the ship once more, and we thank our many supporters for their patience. It's been a long period of closure - but one that was necessary for the urgent roof repairs to be completed. We are extremely grateful to Scott Steel for donating so much of their time and expertise in-kind for this crucial work to be completed. Given the current cost of living crisis, and to mark our re-opening we wanted to offer discount tickets so that as many people as possible are able to enjoy this historic ship, and also hear about our exciting plans for the future!" First launched in 1824, HMS Unicorn is the third oldest ship in the world and has been under the care of the Unicorn Preservation Society since 1968. Scotland's only preserved warship, the Unicorn Preservation Society is working to protect and preserve HMS Unicorn for future generations to enjoy. SNP to elect new Scottish First Minister

As we go to press with this issue a leadership election is being held following First Minister Nicola Sturgeon's announcement that she is standing down. The Scottish Nationalist Party (SNP) will have a new Party Leader on 27 March 2023. The following candidates are nominated and will appear on the ballot paper: Finance Secretary Kate Forbes, Health Secretary Humza Yousaf and former Community Safety Minister Ash Regan who are all in the running to become Scotland's sixth First Minister. The ballot is not open to the public but rather SNP members who are eligible to vote.

The Scottish bookies are favouring Humza Yousaf to win, who is also rumoured to be Nicola Sturgeon's preference, with Kate Forbes seen as the closest rival. All three candidates have stated Scotland can be independent by 2028. The Supreme Court ruled in November 2022 that the Scottish Parliament does not have the power to hold a referendum without the agreement of the UK Government, which is unlikely to be granted. In February Nicola Sturgeon announced she would leave office, being Scotland's first woman and longest serving First Minister. In March, the Deputy First Minister John Swinney MSP also announced when a new First Minister was appointed, he too would leave Government.

World's oldest Post Office For Sale

The world's oldest operating post office has gone on the market again in Sanquhar,

Dumfries and Galloway, in Southwest Scotland. The unique postal heritage site is on the market for £245,000 and attracts many visitors. The origins of Sanquhar Post Office date back to 1712. It is Grade II Listed and is recognised by the Universal Postal Union (the governing body for Postal Administrations around the globe) and the Guinness Book of Records, as the Oldest Post Office in the World. Today it offers many more services than just post and mail and is operated by the current owners who are only the 16th Postmasters in over 300 years. A spokesperson from the Royal Mail was quoted: "Sanquhar Post Office is the world's oldest working post office and we are very proud of its long heritage. There have been 16 owners since it opened in 1712. The Alam family has operated Sanquhar branch since 2015. Sanquhar Post Office is up for sale and interest has been expressed by retailers who want to run this historic branch."

The Storr launches new visitor information website

The Storr visitor attraction has launched its dedicated and branded website, providing information that aims to enhance the visitor experience. The Old Man of Storr project is "for the community, in the community, by the community" working closely with communities and with continual local Member involvement, to celebrate Gaelic and to demonstrate engagement and partnership working.

The Old Man of Storr is an iconic and internationally acclaimed visitor attraction, with annual visitors reaching approx. 200,000 per year. On a clear day, the landmark can be seen from miles around and is a renowned symbol of Scotland. Created by an ancient landslip, the rock face and pinnacles were formed millions of years ago. Legend varies around the 'Old Man', with some locals believing that the pinnacle is the thumb of a giant who is now buried underground, whilst others declare that the face of an old man can be seen in the rock face. Isle of Skye and Raasay Area Committee Chair, Cllr John Finlayson said: "The launch of The Storr visitor information website is another progressive step, to ensure the Storr is further recognised alongside other world-renowned tourist attractions. Offering a digital and social media platform, dedicated to The Storr will enable us to showcase our unique heritage, whilst offering opportunity for local businesses, that could support economic growth in the area." The Old Man of Storr translates to 'Bodach an Stòir' in Gaelic. Gaelic language is a rich part of the local culture, and the website, which will be fully translated to Gaelic in time, has included Gaelic headings to allow visitors to take away key Gaelic words and the meaning behind them. The new Storr website can be accessed at thestorr.com.

The 2023 New Zealand Pipe Band Championships

The skirl of the pipes and drums was heard far and wide in Ōtautahi Christchurch as the 2023 New Zealand and South Pacific Pipe Band Championships returned to the South Island of New Zealand for the first time since 2020. 'The Nationals' had to be postponed in 2022 due to the pandemic – Auckland was to play host, so it was fitting New Zealand's second largest city was the destination for the first championship back in two years. It is the largest pipe band competition in the Southern Hemisphere, with 50 pipe bands from across New Zealand and Australia competing over two days from Juvenile and Grade 4B through to the Grade 1 competition. Unique to New Zealand, the bands performed in a judged (but not part of the aggregate championship) Street March along some of the picturesque streets of Christchurch. Judges came from far and wide across Australasia, with Ian Lyons, Harold Gillespie and Andrew Wormersley coming across from Melbourne to assist Greg Wilson, Stuart Easton, Liam Kernaghan, Ross Levy, and Ian Ferguson judging the music events.

Drawing on the line

Day One saw competition in the Grade 4B, Grade 4A and Grade 3 March, Strathspey and Reel event, the Juvenile event, and the aforementioned Street March. St. Andrew's College from Christchurch took the event with straight first places from the judges, besting current Australian champions Scotch College Pipe Band from Melbourne. The ILT City of Invercargill Highland Pipe Band – the defending Juvenile champions – had to settle for fourth this year. A total of eight bands competed in the Juvenile event, a sign of good things happening at the grassroots level across the South Pacific.

The Street March was the first opportunity to hear the Grade 2 and Grade 1 bands 'strut their stuff'. It was evident right from the get-go that all the bands had really raised their game this year. Inspiring stuff for a lot of the younger pipers and drummers who lined the streets to get their first taste of the best in the business. Auckland & District Pipe Band took out the Grade 1 Street March, with Melbourne-based Hawthorn Pipe Band winning the Grade 2 Street March with some dazzling hornpipes. Day Two was a much busier affair, with the Grade 4B, Grade 4A and Grade 3 bands performing their melodies while the Grade 2 and Grade 1 bands played both their March, Strathspey and Reel and Medley events.

In New Zealand, each band plays in both events for the championship, with Grade 2 and Grade 1 bands 'drawing on the line' their March, Strathspey and Reel.

The top guns

Grade 4B was ultimately won by South Canterbury Pipe Band, with a ten point lead ahead of ILT City of Invercargill Highland Pipe Band. Grade 4A saw Scotch College Pipe Band from Melbourne edge out Hamilton Caledonian Society Pipe Band by one point, with St. Andrew's College B Pipe Band finishing third. Grade 3 was taken out by the City of Tauranga Pipe Band with wins in both the March, Strathspey and Reel and Medley events.

Then it was time for the top guns. Grade 2 was five-strong and full of confidence, music and pizzazz. Hawthorn Pipe Band from Melbourne took straight firsts across all eight judges in the two events, with St. Andrew's College A Pipe Band settling for second. Hawthorn dazzled the crowds with their Medley in particular, which finished with Mark Saul's classic The Stonecutter's Phoenix. Pushing 30 degrees celsius, Auckland & District Pipe Band began the March, Strathspey and Reel.

All five Grade One bands were world-class, and presented a huge challenge for all the music judge to split out into different prizes. Manawatu Scottish Pipe Band took straight firsts from the four piping judges, but it wasn't to be enough as the Canterbury Caledonian Society Pipe Band – hometown favourites – taking all the drumming and ensemble firsts, and winning both events, securing them the overall title. Manawatu was second, with Auckland & District Pipe Band third. All of the judges commented that it was the highest standard of Grade One performance in New Zealand ever.

The event was livestreamed via Youtube thanks to Brassbanned – the same people who livestream major sporting events like the Australian Open. The livestream is available on Youtube, and Grade One and Two performances are split out for ease.

The Prestwick Pioneers

Scottish Aviation Pioneer in RAF Museum in Cosford. Xenomorph, CC BY-SA 4.0.

Prestwick is located in South Ayrshire and is synonymous with Scottish aviation. Ninety years ago this month, on April 3 1933 David McIntyre and Sir Douglas Douglas-Hamilton were the first men to fly over the summit of Mount Everest. The aviators would go on to form Scottish Aviation Ltd at Prestwick, which was the last Scottish aircraft manufacturing company created, as Eric Bryan explains.

The Marquess of Douglas and Clydesdale, Douglas Douglas-Hamilton, and Group Captain Duncan McIntyre were Scottish pioneers of aviation. In April 1933 the pair made the first flight over the peak of Mount Everest, a feat achieved in Westland PV6 and PV3 biplanes with open cockpits. In 1935 Hamilton and McIntyre obtained about 348 acres of land beside Orangefield Hotel (formerly Orangefield House), Monkton, by Prestwick. Pilots had used the site since around 1913, and it saw increased activity in the 1930s when Midland and Scottish airline aircraft would land in the Meadow and the flight crews patronise the Orangefield Hotel.

The Pioneer

Hamilton and McIntyre had a modest control tower built, as well as hangars, offices and lecture halls. Establishing their enterprise as the Scottish College of Aviation Ltd, in 1936 it became simply Scottish Aviation Ltd. That year, Scottish Aviation's No 12 Elementary Flying Training School began training RAF pilots in Tiger Moth biplanes. The firm also soon founded its No 1 Air Observer Navigation School which operated twin-engine monoplane Avro Anson aircraft. In conjunction with its schools, Scottish Aviation expanded into aircraft repair and overhaul services.

The Palace of Engineering was moved from Bellahouston Park, Glasgow to the airfield to provide Scottish Aviation with the required factory space for these activities. The airfield became RAF Prestwick when the RAF took it over with the outbreak of WWII. The site grew quickly to accommodate the heavy traffic of incoming American aircraft. Scottish Aviation serviced and maintained airplanes for the RAF, work which involved fitting American aircraft with British weapons and avionics. This included converting B-24 Liberators to be enlisted for missions over the North Atlantic by the RAF Ferry, Transport and Coastal Commands. Scottish Aviation also oversaw repairs on Hurricanes and Spitfires, and did repairs and overhauls of Sunderland flying boats. When the war ended, Scottish Aviation pilot training operations ceased and the Prestwick site was developed into a large air base to serve the USAF.

In the immediate post-war years, Scottish Aviation developed a utility transport airplane called the Pioneer. This was to be a light communication aircraft per the requirements of the Air Ministry. A high-wing monoplane, it was fitted with a 240hp engine and had its maiden flight in 1947. The Pioneer proved to be underpowered, so the RAF didn't place an order for the machine. This outcome led Scottish Aviation to focus on a civilian version of the aircraft, called the Pioneer II. Fitted with a 520hp engine, the Pioneer II took its first flight in 1950. With the new more powerful motor, the Pioneer II exhibited superb short take-off and landing (STOL) abilities. This led the RAF to order the aircraft, which was designated the Pioneer CC1. The addition of large leading edge slats and trailing edge flaps to the wings of the production models enhanced the Pioneer's STOL characteristics: its take-off rolling distance was as little as 225 ft, and its landing run distance as paltry as 200 ft. Scottish Aviation began to deliver the Pioneer to the RAF in 1953. The RAF enlisted the Pioneer for casualty evacuation in Aden, Cyprus and the Malayan Emergency. In Malaysia and Borneo, the RAF Pioneers demonstrated their capability of flying in and out of very short airstrips (some only 480 feet long) in rough terrain and tropical temperatures. The airplane remained in RAF service until 1969. The Pioneer also served with the Royal Malayan Air Force and Royal Ceylon Air Force.

Scottish Aviation

Scottish Aviation next developed what was considered a two-engine version of the Pioneer. The Twin Pioneer was a high-wing airplane with triple tail fins. The first prototype flew from Prestwick in 1955. In 1957 there were two fatal accidents caused by wing panel failures on the Twin Pioneer, leading to some major design changes. Scottish Aviation developed a Series 2 version of the airplane in 1958, and a Series 3 came along in 1959. Scottish Aviation produced military versions of the aircraft which could carry weaponry under its stub wings. The RAF ordered 39 Twin Pioneer aircraft, which they deployed mainly for troop and supply transport in the Far East and the Middle East. They saw action in Borneo and in the Malayan Emergency. The Twin Pioneer could operate out of airstrips of about 900 feet in length which made it ideal for missions in the Far East where short and rugged jungle landing strips were typical.

The Twin Pioneer went into commercial use as a transport aircraft in situations where rough, impromptu airfields were used. Oil exploration companies and the Austrian and Swiss governments also used the Twin Pioneer for surveying. In the 1960s, Scottish Aviation supported all aircraft of the Royal Canadian Air Force which were operating in Europe. In this capacity the firm carried out more than 1000 test flights of the Canadair CF-104 Starfighter from Prestwick. When Beagle Aircraft Ltd of England went bankrupt in 1969, Scottish Aviation took over production rights to its airplane called the B125 Bulldog, as well as the Swedish Air Board's order for 78 units of the aircraft. The Bulldog was a single-engine low-wing aerobatics-capable trainer. Scottish Aviation completed 58 Bulldogs which went to the Swedish Air Force in 1971, and 20 more were delivered to the Swedish Army in 1972. The RAF ordered 130 Bulldogs in 1972, which they put into service in 1975 as the Bulldog T1. The airplane saw extensive use as a basic trainer for the RAF. Air forces in Africa, the Middle East, Malta and the Far East also enlisted the Bulldog.

In the mid-1960s Handley Page Ltd of England developed a small airliner, called the Jetstream. This was a low-wing twin turboprop aircraft intended to seat 18-20. Scottish Aviation built complete Jetstream wing structures for Handley Page. The prototype flew in 1967, and the production model, the Jetstream 1, took to the sky in 1968. Handley Page launched the Jetstream 2, which had more powerful engines than did the Jetstream 1, in 1969. But the Jetstream project had gone £10 million over the projected budget, and Handley Page went bankrupt in 1970 after completing only three Jetstream 2 examples.

Scottish Aviation and a group of investors then formed the Jetstream Aircraft consortium to produce the Jetstream. Scottish Aviation manufactured ten more Jetstream 1 aircraft, and produced the Jetstream 2 as the Jetstream 200. The RAF ordered 26 Jetstreams in 1972. Produced as the Jetstream 201, the RAF used them as trainers designated Jetstream T1. The Royal Navy acquired 14 of these which were configured as observer trainers, designated Jetstream T2. The Jetstream was employed by airlines in Argentina, Libya, Colombia, Denmark, Germany and the United States. Besides being put into service by the RAF and Royal Navy, the Jetstream was also enlisted by the Uruguayan Navy. In 1977 Scottish Aviation merged with the British Aircraft Corporation, Hawker Siddeley Aviation and Hawker Siddeley Dynamics to form British Aerospace plc. British Aerospace continued to develop and produce the Jetstream as the Jetstream 31 and 32, and Jetstream 41. The Jetstream 31 and 32 had more powerful engines than did previous models, while the Jetstream 41 was a stretched version of the 31 which could seat 29 passengers. Aircraft manufacture at Prestwick finally ended in 1997-98, but many of the British Aerospace Jetstreams are still in active service as airliners.

A Celebration of Tartan

V&A Dundee present major exhibition solely on tartan

Tartan (1 April 2023 – 14 January 2024) at V&A Dundee takes a radical new look at an instantly recognisable textile and pattern. Set to be a major event in 2023's cultural calendar, Tartan marks the 5th anniversary of Scotland's design museum. Celebrating tartan and its global impact, the exhibition explores how tartan has connected and divided communities worldwide, how it has embraced tradition, expressed revolt, and inspired great works of art as well as playful and provocative designs. Tartan at V&A Dundee brings together a dazzling selection of more than 300 objects from over 80 lenders worldwide, illustrating tartan's universal and enduring appeal through iconic and everyday examples of fashion, architecture, graphic and product design, photography, furniture, glass and ceramics, film, performance and art.

The exhibition features loans from across Scotland and around the world, including Chanel, Dior, Vivienne Westwood, Alexander McQueen, Tate, V&A, National Museums of Scotland, National Trust for Scotland, National Theatre of Scotland, The Royal Collection, Fashion Museum Bath, the Highland Folk Museum and more, many of which are being shown together in Scotland for the first time.

Tartan's importance

Tartan's importance and enduring appeal as a textile has been utilised by designers throughout history, with some of fashion's most innovative and rebellious minds exercising their refined cutting skills on tartan as a fabric. This will be reflected with pieces by Chanel, Dior, Alexander McQueen, Vivienne Westwood and Comme des Garçons, alongside the work of contemporary designers inspired by tartan including Grace Wales Bonner, Nicholas Daley, Louise Gray, Charles Jeffrey, Owen Snaith and Olubiyi Thomas. The exhibition takes a radical new look at tartan, juxtaposing historical objects with the contemporary and is laid out in five sections where visitors can immerse themselves in the world of Tartan.

Tartan and the Grid looks at the basic structure of tartan, introduced through textiles from around the world and positioning Tartan as a set of rules to be disrupted by designers. Innovating Tartan looks at how tartan has always been at the intersection of technical innovation. Tartan has been translated into a pattern manifested in an incredible variety of materials, from natural to the synthetic, and even glass. It covers every imaginable surface, securing its position at the forefront of art and design. In Tartan and Identity, tartan's global fascination including its importance to diasporic communities is examined. Also, the appeal tartan has always held for those who express themselves through their clothing, from the traditional to the radical.

Tartan and Power shows how it disrupts and conforms. A force of pride and might, used to push boundaries or maintain control in war and peacetime. Transcendental Tartan transports visitors to new worlds and possibilities in fashion, media, performance and popular culture.

The exhibition will look at tartan's many narratives and how it is used by designers as a medium for myth and storytelling. In addition, V&A Dundee has asked the public to contribute to the exhibition. This will be The People's Tartan, an eclectic selection of objects and memories that will spark recognition and nostalgia.

Scotland's most iconic design

To commemorate this landmark exhibition, V&A Dundee has commissioned Kinloch Anderson to design a new tartan to be used as the museum's exclusive tartan and developed a range of merchandise in collaboration with designers in Scotland. The spectrum of how tartan has been worn is covered in the exhibition, from an eighteenth-century tartan dress coat for the Ancient Caledonian Society, to a significant photograph from around 1908 of Scottish Suffragettes proudly wearing tartan sashes. From Sir Jackie Stewart's racing helmet with its distinctive Royal Stewart tartan band, through to contemporary streetwear from Japan. Tartan includes objects that illustrate the global translation, appropriation, reach and appeal of tartan across cultures and borders. The indigenous textiles of Indian Madras and East African Shuka cloth are explored in relation to tartan in the exhibition. Global, diasporic and even out of this world connections are represented too, with an ensemble made from Canadian Maple Leaf tartan and a fragment of MacBean tartan taken aboard Apollo 12 in November 1969 by American astronaut Alan Bean.

Paintings, including Donald Judd's minimalist grids, Christian Hook's oil painting of actor Alan Cumming and Gerard Burns' portrait of the late former Scotland International rugby star Doddie Weir OBE, sit alongside the seventeenth-century image of Lord Mungo Murray by John Michael Wright. There are items of devotion, from a fragment of tartan worn by Prince Charles Edward Stuart, now afforded relic status, to Bay City Rollers trousers, handmade by a lifelong fan. From the sublime through to the everyday - even the humble but iconic tartan shortbread tin has been considered.

Leonie Bell, V&A Dundee Director, says: "To mark our 5th birthday we are celebrating and challenging the history and contradictions within Scotland's most iconic design. Everyone knows tartan, in Scotland and across the world, and it is linked to a hugely diverse range of identities. It is at once the pattern of Highland myth and legend, forever entwined with Bonnie Prince Charlie and the Jacobite uprising, as well as being the pattern of 1970s punks and contemporary Japanese fashion influencers. Tartan lives in the worlds of high fashion and tourism souvenirs, military uniform and palaces, football stadiums and concerts. It is adored and derided, has inspired great works of art and design, and somehow can represent unity and dissent, tradition and rebellion, the past, the present and the future. Tartan - the instantly recognisable symbol of Scotland, a global textile of oppression, rebellion, and fashion, is major and must-see show for 2023."

Consultant curator Professor Jonathan Faiers, said: "The diversity that this exhibition encompasses is an indication of the significant position that tartan occupies as a visual representation of historical, political and economic shifts within society. Marked by wars and revolutions, modified by migrations and prohibitions, tartan is uniquely positioned to act as a reminder of the past whilst clothing the present. As tartan so richly demonstrates, textiles, from the smallest details of their pattern and construction to their global dissemination, provide rules to be disrupted with which we can understand historical transformations within society and developments in our own time. The intersections and spaces between warp and weft provide a textile template for the collisions, coincidences and ruptures that punctuate society."

Kirsty Hassard, Curator at V&A Dundee, added: "Tartan has been constantly reinvented and that is incredibly important to the narrative of the exhibition. It's a pattern and textile that stretches back thousands of years, and some of the stories the exhibition tells are 300 years old or more, but Tartan isn't a retrospective, it is absolutely a contemporary show. Within excess of 300 objects from more than 80 lenders around the globe, Tartan tells the story of how this pattern has travelled and explores the connection we all have to it."

V&A Dundee is Scotland's design museum. Designed by Kengo Kuma, the museum is at the centre of Dundee's reimagined waterfront and is part of the V&A family of museums that celebrate creativity in all its forms from across centuries, for everyone.

Entry to the exhibition is free for members and 18s and under. Tickets are now on sale at www.vam.ac.uk/dundee/exhibitions/tartan

Scotland is calling for your family holiday

A trend which is increasingly emerging in global travel is for families taking multi-generational breaks. Although this was the case before the Coronavirus pandemic, that unprecedented global event seems to have encouraged and inspired families to get together and enjoy a family holiday across the generations. Whatever the shape of your family – from toddlers to teenagers; the young to the young-at-heart – Scotland offers a wealth of experiences for all ages to enjoy. Here's our pick of ideas to inspire your multi-generational family break!

Literature, films, and TV shows which tell stories of Scotland, or shows which have been filmed there, often inspire those wishing to explore the places they've seen on screen or read about. Great options for family breaks would be:

- Locations associated with film versions of JK Rowling's Harry Potter books, such as the Glenfinnan Viaduct which the Jacobite Steam Train crosses (journey to Hogwarts) and Glen Coe (the fictional site of Hagrid's Hut).
- Moat Brae in Dumfries (incorporating the National Centre for Children's Literature and Storytelling), said to have inspired the enchanted lands described in JM Barrie's Peter Pan.
- The Beatrix Potter Garden in Dunkeld, Perthshire, which captures the Peter Rabbit characters and the magical summers the author spent here.
- Real life places which feature in the Outlander books by Diana Gabaldon and the related hit TV series such as Culloden Battlefield near Inverness, and places used as set locations, including Doune Castle near Stirling, the conservation towns of Falkland and Culross in Fife, and Linlithgow Palace in West Lothian.
- Edinburgh, UNESCO's first ever City of Literature, is home to the Writers Museum showcasing the stories of three of Scotland's best loved writers (Sir Walter Scott, Robert Louis Stevenson and Robert Burns), as well as the Scottish Storytelling Centre on the famous Royal Mile - hub of the Scottish International Storytelling Festival which takes place each October.

Family Friendly Holiday Hotels

For an easy to plan multi-generational break, what better than a stay in a great hotel in a stunning location with a range of activities for all generations of the family on offer?

- In Perthshire, the world famous Gleneagles, Dunkeld House Hotel on the banks of the River Tay, and Crieff Hydro Hotel with its programme of over 60 activities, offer all manner of outdoor pursuits, all against the backdrop of this beautiful part of Scotland.
- Cameron House on the bonnie banks of Loch Lomond offers loch cruises, Segway safaris, horse riding and more.
- Auchrannie Resort on the Isle of Arran has an array of activities to be enjoyed on this wonderful island known as Scotland in miniature.
- At the heart of Cairngorms National Park, Macdonald Aviemore Highland Resort has a tremendous range of activities amid some of Scotland's most dramatic landscapes.

Family Friendly Castle Stays

Who wouldn't relish the change to enjoy a stay in a Scottish castle, irrespective of age? Definitely something to tell the folks back home about! Excellent options for multi-generational family breaks include:

- Dalhousie Castle in Midlothian which boasts a 700-year history as well as extensive grounds and its own Falconry offering hands-in experiences with 30 beautiful birds.
- The magnificent Thirlestane Castle in the Scottish Borders offering a range of exciting pre-bookable activities from tomahawk throwing to survival skills.
- Muckrach Castle in Morayshire, which can be hired out in its entirety for a self-catering break, allowing you to be king and queens of your very own castle!
- From Lodges to Lighthouses
- There's something about staying in a holiday lodge that brings back memories of family holidays in years gone by, and these days there are so many different quirky holiday options on offer in Scotland that will be sure to inspire a similar sense of wonder for younger family members. Options include:
- Argyll Holidays - a range of holiday park locations in picturesque waterfront settings across Argyll, from luxury hot tub lodges to static caravans and glamping.
- St Andrews Forest Lodges - a wonderful selection of log cabins, each with its own private hot tub – ideal for relaxing after a day exploring St Andrews or cycling the Fife Coastal Path.
- Cairngorm Lodges - forest retreats in Aboyne at the heart of Royal Deeside, with lodges and cabins charmingly named after local wildlife species.

- Staying in a lighthouse, such as Rua Reidh Lighthouse in Gairloch, Eshaness Lighthouse in Shetland and Mull of Galloway Lighthouse Holiday Cottages near Stranraer.

Fun-packed Farm Stays

Agritourism has become increasingly popular, and the whole family can learn about sustainable farming methods, get to know some of the animals and enjoy the freshest of local produce. The Go Rural agritourism partnership offers a wealth of options such as:

- Newton Farm Holidays near Forfar in Angus where you can meet iconic Highland cattle, feed the lambs, or take an alpaca for a stroll.
- Lennox of Lomond, where you can experience all the fun of the farm on the hills overlooking the bonnie banks.
- Old Leckie Farm, Gargunnoch near Stirling, situated on land once owned by Robert the Bruce.

Days Out With A Difference

Wherever you choose to visit in Scotland, you're guaranteed to enjoy fantastic days out which every generation of the family can enjoy. Here are just some of the experiences you can choose from:

- Join Highland Safaris for a Land Rover safari in the hills above Aberfeldy, or a sailing safari on Loch Tay, keeping an eye out for local wildlife as you go.
- Visit fascinating museums such as Riverside Museum of Transport in Glasgow, V&A Museum of Design in Dundee, Aberdeen Maritime Museum, Auchindrain Historic Township near Inveraray, Skye Museum of Island Life and the National Museum of Flight in East Lothian.
- Attend a traditional Scottish Highland Games, taking place in locations across Scotland from May to September.
- Take a boat trip from the Scottish Seabird Centre in North Berwick, East Lothian to the iconic Bass Rock to spot the area's abundant wildlife, including the world's largest colony of Northern Gannets.
- Visit Scotland's most colourful castle - Kelburn Castle and Country Centre near Largs, Ayrshire.
- Go stargazing at Galloway International Dark Sky Park at the heart of Dumfries and Galloway – one of only four in the world.
- Don those dancing shoes to take part in a Scottish ceilidh evening at Ghillie Dhu in Edinburgh or Skipinnish Ceilidh House in Oban.

Island Life

An island holiday is a truly special experience to be shared with multiple generations of your family. In Scotland we're lucky enough to have something few other countries can offer – an abundance of stunning islands, each with its own unique history, culture, and atmosphere. Which will you choose?

- The Isle of Mull with its wealth of wildlife tour options including boat trips to neighbouring islands, and its picture-postcard capital, Tobermory.
- The Isle of Islay, home to unique nature reserves and a rich whisky producing heritage.
- Orkney, famed for its natural beauty, archaeological sites and First and Second World War heritage.
- Shetland with its dramatic Viking past, equally dramatic coastlines and seascapes, prehistoric sites, abundant wild and bird life, and of course delightful Shetland ponies.
- The Isle of Bute, home to Mount Stuart, unquestionably one of Scotland's most stunning and unusual stately homes.
- The Outer Hebrides where you'll experience rich Gaelic Island culture, Harris Tweed making traditions, incredible coastlines, and the finest produce the Atlantic larder can offer.

Get Active

For families who like nothing better than to get active together, Scotland offers experiences to suit all tastes and abilities.

- Join Perthshire-based Nae Limits on one of their exhilarating activities, from white water rafting and river tubing to gorge walking and canyoning.
- Get a bird's eye view of Scotland's amazing forests at one of Go Ape's zip wire centres across Scotland.
- Go land yachting along the beach at St Andrews with Blown Away.
- 'Bag a Munro' - a Scottish mountain with an elevation of more than 3,000 feet (914 metres). There are nearly 300 to choose from, each with stunning views as your reward for reaching the summit!
- Play a round in the undisputed Home of Golf – there are 550+ to choose from!
- Enjoy the unique experience of exploring Scotland on two feet or two wheels. From long-distance walking and cycling trails to forest paths, coastal walks, and purpose-built trails at no less than 25 world-class mountain biking centres, you're sure to find options to suit your family's needs.
- If you'd rather spectate, the 2023 UCI Cycling World Championships – the biggest cycling event ever – takes place in Glasgow and across Scotland on 3-13 August 2023.

The suggestions here are just a small taster of the regions, attractions and businesses that can help ensure you and your family have a truly memorable time in Scotland, whatever the make-up, age range and abilities of your group.

IN THE SCOTTISH KITCHEN

Scotch Broth

Ingredients:

A piece of boiling beef (runner, thin rib or flank, or neck of mutton or shoulder of lamb), weighing about 700g/1 ½ lbs.
 150g/5oz. dried marrowfat peas, soaked overnight, then drained
 75g/3oz. pearl barley, soaked overnight, then drained
 25g/1oz. parsley (including stalks)
 200g/7oz. carrots, peeled and diced finely
 150g/5oz. kail, washed and chopped finely
 200g/7oz. turnip, peeled and diced finely
 1 large onion, peeled and chopped finely
 Salt and freshly-ground black pepper, to taste

Method:

Place the meat in a large pan with the soaked peas, barley and parsley stalks. Cover with cold water, about 2.2 litres/4 pints, and bring slowly to the boil. Skim off any scum and reduce the heat to a simmer. Cover and cook for at least 1 hour or until the peas are tender. Remove the parsley stalks if possible (no need to worry if some remain) and add all the vegetables. Bring to the boil again and cook for about 20 minutes, until the vegetables are tender. Chop the parsley and add most of it to the soup with salt and pepper to taste. To serve, remove the meat from the pan and cut it into pieces. Add these to the soup and serve, sprinkled with the remaining parsley. You could, if you wish, serve the vegetable broth first, then the beef as a main course, in which case add a few tiny whole vegetables with diced ones to serve with the meat. Serves 6.

Granite City Sausages

Ingredients:

500g/1lb. sausage meat
 500g/1lb. steak, minced
 125g/4oz. bacon, minced
 250g/8oz. fresh white breadcrumbs
 1 tablespoonful Worcestershire sauce
 Salt and pepper, to season
 1 egg, beaten
 Breadcrumbs, for coating

Method:

Mix together all the ingredients, except for the last two. Bind with the beaten egg and make into a roll. Boil in a floured cloth for approximately 1 ½ hours. Roll in the breadcrumbs that have been toasted in the oven. Serve cold with a salad if wished. Serves 6.

Moray Pie

Ingredients:

500g/1lb. steak, minced
 60g/2oz. butter
 3 small carrots, grated
 3 small onions, chopped
 4 fl. oz./½ pint beef stock or water
 Salt and freshly-ground black pepper
 500g/1lb. potatoes

Method:

Fry the mince in the butter until brown in colour, then add the grated carrots and chopped onions, and fry gently for another 2 minutes. Add the stock and seasoning and simmer for 30 minutes. Parboil the potatoes and cut them into slices approximately ¼ inch thick. Place the meat mixture into a piedish and top with the sliced potatoes. Brush with some melted butter and brown under a grill. Serve, garnished with parsley. Serves 4.

Smoked Salmon Fish Cakes

Ingredients:

225g/8oz. smoked salmon, shredded
 170g/6oz. mashed potatoes
 Salt and freshly-ground black pepper
 30g/1oz. butter, melted
 1 tablespoonful fresh parsley, chopped
 1 egg, beaten
 Dried white breadcrumbs
 5 tablespoonfuls oil, for frying

Method:

Mix together the smoked salmon and the mashed potatoes. Season well with the salt and black pepper. Add the melted butter, parsley and enough beaten egg to bind the mixture until it is soft, but not sloppy, then allow it to cool. Flour the hands and shape the mixture into 8 flat cakes approximately 1 inch thick. Brush the cakes with beaten egg and coat with the breadcrumbs. Heat the oil in a frying pan and fry until the fish cakes are brown on both sides. Serve with lemon wedges, if wished. Serves 4.

Sultana Cake

Ingredients:

175g/6oz. butter, softened
 175g/6oz. caster sugar
 3 medium sized eggs
 225g/8oz. plain flour, sifted
 225g/8 oz. sultanas
 1 level dessert spoonful granulated sugar

Method:

Pre-heat the oven to 325F/170C/Gas Mark 3. Cream together the butter and sugar until pale in colour. Beat in the eggs one at a time with one-third of the flour after each addition. Stir in the sultanas and mix well to form a fairly stiff dough. Turn the mixture into a buttered, base-lined, deep 18 cm/7 inch cake tin and bake for approximately 60 minutes or until a skewer inserted in the centre comes out clean. Turn off the oven and sprinkle the granulated sugar over the cake. Return the cake to the oven for 3 to 4 minutes, then place on a wire rack to cool. When cold, turn out of the tin.

Soor Mulk Scones

Ingredients:

60g/2oz. butter or margarine
 1 egg
 300ml/½ pint buttermilk
 500g/1lb. self-raising flour
 ½ teaspoonful salt
 1 dessert spoonful sugar

Method:

Melt the butter or margarine then beat the egg, and add both to the buttermilk, mixing well together. Add the dry ingredients and mix to a soft dough. Turn out on to a floured surface and knead very lightly ---the secret of success with scones is to knead the dough as little as possible. Cut off pieces of the dough and flatten with the hand. Prick with a fork. Bake for 10 to 15 minutes in an oven at 400F, 200C, Gas Mark 6.

The Rob Roy

Ingredients:

50ml/2oz. Scotch whisky
 20ml/.75oz. sweet vermouth
 3-4 dashes Angostura bitters
 Cocktail cherry

Method

Add all ingredients to a mixing glass with ice. Stir. Strain into a chilled cocktail glass. Garnish with a cocktail cherry.

Neolithic Orkney Ness dig to come to a completion from the environmental samples, will help unpick the story of the people who built, used and ultimately abandoned the site in the centuries around 2500BC. Excavation is the most visible aspect of archaeology and is perhaps seen as the most exciting. But the process of post-excavation is just as vital. It often leads to new and exciting revelations when science and expert know-how come to the fore to help to understand the life of a place. As to the site itself, it will be covered and returned to being a green field after the conclusion of the 2024 season.

It will be left for future generations of archaeologists to continue the work with even better scientific techniques to bring to bear on the archaeology. Although the excavation site will no longer be open to the public, the Ness team are looking to set up virtual tours via www.nessofbrodgar.co.uk and groups wishing to visit after excavation finishes can do still do so by prior arrangement, guided by one of the Ness team. The website will also continue to be the source of updates and news.

In addition, the new project phase includes major plans for online content covering even more about the Ness and what we are discovering during post-excavation. If you want to see the historic site while excavation is in progress, there are just two more seasons to visit. This year the Ness of Brodgar is open from July 5 to August 16, 2023, and next year from July 3 until the end of August 2024, funding permitting.

With some reluctance, it has been decided that there will be only two further seasons of excavation at the Ness of Brodgar – this summer and in the summer of 2024. Although fieldwork could continue for decades, the Ness of Brodgar project have reached the logical place to pause, as work on the major structures uncovered so far will be completed.

However, while on-site excavation will end, the Ness of Brodgar research project continues. It is simply moving into a new and exciting phase of intensive work, with the focus on scientific analysis of all the recovered material – pottery, stone tools, bone and much more – found on site. This must be fully catalogued and examined by specialists. The results, along with those

Berry Celtic Festival unites Celtic spirits

The sixteenth Berry Celtic Festival on the 27 May 2023, is a uniting of Celtic spirits. Many enjoy Celtic gatherings as a place to reflect on past stories, our family histories and give life to the faces in yellowing photos.

That moment when the mass bands stream onto the arena causes us, like our ancestors, to hear the cries of the bag pipes rallying emotions - causing us to feel the mystical spirits of the past. Such as the ghost of Robbie the Bruce standing on the hill, sword raised encouraging us to push forward in our daily lives with conviction and passion.

At Celtic festivals across the country, clans are represented by their regents and commissioners - all playing a part in the tapestry of clan life. These representatives, attend events to make themselves available to talk about clan history and organisation structures. This year we will have a unique gathering of representatives of the Clan Buchanan Chief's Council in attendance. The people key in the 2022 inauguration activities of the Chief in Scotland, who are now taking the clan into the future.

The 2023 Berry Celtic Festival will be building on last year's castle keep feel with the stalls, Scottish soldiers' camp, Celtic musicians, the spinners and weavers, and artisans forming an avenue around the parade ground where the pipes and drum bands, knights on steeds, dancers and Scottish soldiers feature in the entertainment program. Games, tea, coffee and scones, crafts, a steam engine, fiddles, kilts, long socks, sashes, feathers all at the Berry Showground on the 27 May 2023.

The Rotary Club of Berry stages the Celtic Festival as a fund-raising activity where proceeds go towards disaster relief projects, education programs, and community development. Join us ... the $15 entry fee will allow you to unite with your Celtic spirit.

Check the website www.berryrotary.org.au for full details and ticketing arrangements.

Echoes of the past on East Cowal's trails

Puck, the mischievous sprite from Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream, would be suitably impressed by the idyllic Argyll woodland trail that bears his name. Puck's Glen, just a five-minute drive from Dunoon with its ferry links to Greenock and Gourock, is one of a number of historical and natural landmarks that form part of the East Cowal Heritage Outdoors (ECHO) trails.

Dotted around a small peninsula that forms part of the spectacular but little known Cowal region of Argyll, the ECHO Trails represent an effective 'packaging' of an area that really could lay claim to being a geographical and geological gateway to the Scottish Highlands. The project was officially launched in July 2022 with the help of partner organisations that include the Loch Lomond & Trossachs National Park, Forestry & Land Scotland, Historic Scotland and the Argyll & Isles Tourism Co-operative. Accessed by both foot passenger and car ferries from Greenock and Gourock respectively, as well as by car through the stunning Rest & Be Thankful mountain pass, east Cowal comprises of a number of small settlements including Kilmun, Ardentinny, Strone, Blairmore and Lochgoilhead and loops around the banks of Holy Loch and Lochs Long, Goil and Eck.

The Kingdom of Dalriada

This is an area, originally part of the Kingdom of Dalriada, that has played a pivotal role in the moulding of Scotland through the ages with early Christian faith playing a part alongside some truly grim and gruesome clan rivalries. The gorge that Puck's Glen meanders through was developed by the Laird of Benmore, James Duncan, in the 1870s. The 2.8km walkway, categorised as a strenuous trail, is an enchanting and mystical journey through a lush habitat that's rich in mosses and ferns and punctuated with delightful waterfall after delightful waterfall. It also showcases the finest aspects of the Argyll Forest, the UK's oldest managed forest that dates back to the 1930s.

Just down the road in Kilmun there's a clearly signposted arboretum with a number of walking trails of differing length and challenge that features trees from five different continents. It's a showroom, if you like, for the forest as a whole but one that reflects the international roots associated with Argyll and this corner of Cowal specifically.

There's Elizabeth Blackwell for starters. Starter of a revolution in the field of healthcare as well as being a social reformer and genuine changemaker. She forged a path in the mid-19th century as one of the first female doctors in the world, opening up opportunities for millions of women ever since and breaking down barriers wherever she worked in the US, France and across the UK. Elizabeth was laid to rest just a few yards beyond the arboretum at St Munns Church, now home to the Historic Kilmun community and heritage organisation. It also hosts Faith in Cowal, an organisation that's established a number of popular pilgrimage trails across the entirety of the Cowal peninsulas.

There's a wealth of local stories to be found at this church-come-museum with visitors exploring Kilmun's fascinating heritage as well as the resting place for countless Dukes of Argyll and Campbell clan chiefs.

Further on down the A880 coast road, pier pressure begins to tell with Kilmun, Strone and Blairmore's marine promontories piercing the shoreline of the Holy Loch and Loch Long. All date back to the Victorian era when this part of the world became the 'go to' place for thousands of Glaswegians. They still do but are now joined by visitors from across the UK and much further afield enticed by that mystical grip that Scotland's lochs and mountains exert on the human soul. Further on, the village of Ardentinny has a wealth of history and nature to draw the visitors in. From the beach, a wild camping magnet for responsible campervanners with a network of different walks, to the Dun Daraich stone age fort that's all but hidden from sight.

Decidedly pucker

From here, overlooking the Coulpport nuclear submarine base, there's a 5 mile shoreline walk to the 17th century Carrick Castle, now a private residence but another site resonant in conflict as a focal point for the many grisly feuds between the Campbell and the Lamont clans. Time it right and you'll be able to get the minibus back!

Follow the road over to the Whistlefield Inn and you'll be rewarded with some truly iconic vistas over Loch Eck. It's money shot after money shot for those photographers with a fondness for exquisite natural compositions...as well as a decent pint and quality food in what is a supremely located, 17th century drover's inn! It's up there with the Clachaig in Glencoe and the Sligachan on Skye as Scotland's finest hosteleries.

Turn right here onto the A815 and you'll soon be at Lauder Monument, an impressively positioned shrine to John Lauder, a victim of World War One and son of Harry Lauder who purchased the Glenbranter estate in 1916. Harry was an international superstar at the turn of the 20th century, performing all over the world and becoming the highest paid entertainer on the planet.

Glenbranter, just beyond the conclusion of Loch Eck, also offers a range of paths for all abilities that snake their way through a vibrant forestscape. Head back towards Dunoon past another exquisite, picture postcard hostelry, the Coylet Inn. You'll soon be back at Puck's Glen but not before coming across the fantastic Benmore Gardens. It's a large botanical paradise spread across the foothills of Beinn Mhòr and a heavenly haven for anyone with a passion for plants in their myriad forms.

There are 10 key locations within the ECHO Trails along with a number of places of interest as well as woodland walks, hikes and cycling trails across this small part of a small part of Argyll. There is so much to see and do in what is a microcosm of everything Scottish Highlands...but a wee bit closer. When describing the humans entering his woodland fairy realm, Puck utters one of his most famous lines "What fools these mortals be". You'll beg to differ. Spend a few days exploring this forested and loch fringed world and you'll be feeling far from foolish...and decidedly pucker!

Scotland's Fictional Statues

The Stewart Memorial Fountain.

Statues, and the people they commemorate, have become a hot topic in recent years, but there are some types of statues that are usually uncontroversial. In particular, fictional statues, statues of fictional characters, tend to be much-loved. One of the most statued fictional characters is Peter Pan; the creation of Scottish writer JM Barrie is famously commemorated in Kensington Gardens in London (where some of Peter's adventures happened) by Sir George Frampton 1912 statue. Castings of the same statue can be found all over the world, for example, in Liverpool, Brussels, Perth WA, St Johns in Newfoundland, Toronto and New Jersey.

There's a more recent Peter Pan statue, by Alistair Smart, in Kirriemuir, Barrie's home town. It dates from 1994 and replaces an older one. Another in Newton Mearns near Glasgow was raised in 1949 to commemorate Dr John A Wilson, former superintendent at the nearby Mearnskirk Hospital. The statue was sculpted by Alexander Proudfoot and its plinth held four panels showing scenes from Peter Pan, featuring characters such as Captain Hook and the crocodile. Sadly, these four panels have disappeared over the years. The statue is currently in storage. The hospital has been closed and demolished and Peter Pan will be given a suitable new home when a new housing estate is complete. Peter Pan was born, you might say, in Dumfries. Barrie claimed that the garden of Moat Brae House, where he lived from the age of 13, was where he first had the idea for the tales. A wooden figure of Peter at a road junction now confidently proclaims Dumfries as 'Birthplace of Peter Pan' while Moat Brae, now reinvented as the National Centre for Storytelling and Children's Literature, has another Peter Pan statue in the garden where the boy who never grew up was born.

A fine tribute

The Stewart Memorial Fountain in Glasgow's Kelvingrove Park was completed in 1872 and commemorates the completion of the remarkable Loch Katrine aqueduct. Lord Provost Robert Stewart was one of those who campaigned for the engineering project that ensured Glasgow would have the best tap water anywhere. Appropriately, the fountain was decorated with scenes from Sir Walter Scott's narrative poem The Lady of the Lake which was set in and around Loch Katrine. On top of the fountain structure is a fine, curvaceous statue of Ellen Douglas, the fictional lady of the lake (or loch). The fountain was designed by James Sellars while the sculptor of the figures was John Mossman.

Sherlock Holmes is probably the most famous fictional creation by any Scot, more famous even than Peter Pan. His creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was commemorated in his native Edinburgh by a stereotypical figure of Holmes, pipe in hand and wearing a deerstalker. It stood at the city's Picardy Place. Currently, like the Mearnskirk Peter Pan, the figure is in storage, during works for the Edinburgh Trams extension. Conan Doyle was born at 11 Picardy Place, though the actual building does not survive. The statue should return to the vicinity soon. When it does, it'll be very easy to get there because there will be a Picardy Place tram stop. What you won't see from pavement level is what Sherlock Holmes is examining with his magnifying glass. On the upper surface of the plinth there is, apparently, a pawprint. If you know your Holmes, you'll know that it's intended to be 'the footprint of an enormous hound'!

Another Edinburgh native, Robert Louis Stevenson, wrote one of the great adventure tales in 1886's Kidnapped. Stevenson's heroes, symbols of a divided Scotland, were David Balfour and Alan Breck. They escaped the redcoats through the Highlands towards Edinburgh, finally approaching the city over Corstorphine Hill. Nearby, on Corstorphine Road, there's an imposing 2004 Sandy Stoddart statue of David and Alan, a fine tribute to the book, to the characters and, above all, to Stevenson. The statues we've looked at so far all commemorate fictional characters, but at least they are all obviously supposed to be recognisable human beings. However, Scotland has a number of statues of fictional cartoon characters. Dundee is famously the home of DC Thomson, publishers of The Dandy and The Beano. In the city's High Street you'll find a statue of the most famous Dandy character; Desperate Dan, the strong and mighty cowboy who loved eating cow pies. He's accompanied by his dog (unimaginatively named 'Dawg') and Minnie the Minx, another much-loved DC Thomson character. These statues appeared in 2001, sculpted by local artists Tony and Susie Morrow.

Something genuine and lasting

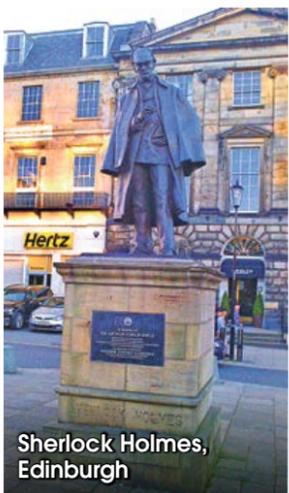

My favourite cartoon statues, though, are in Glasgow. In the 1940s and 50s, the legendary Glasgow cartoonist Bud Neill contributed the cartoon strip Lobey Dosser to the Evening Times. The stories were set in Calton Creek, a Wild West town populated entirely by Glaswegian emigrants. The humour was a glorious mix of Glasgow wit, sly satire and Pythonesque surrealism. Lobey Dosser himself was the Elen Douglas on the Stewart Memorial Fountain.

Sheriff of Calton Creek and his faithful steed was El Fieldeo (or 'Elfie' for short). Elfie only had two legs; Neill claimed this was because he struggled to draw horses with four legs. As such, the statue of Lobey Dosser and his arch-enemy Rank Bajin astride Elfie, which has stood in the city's Woodlands Road since 1992, is said to be the world's only two-legged equestrian statue. I suppose it must be. It was sculpted by Nick Gillan and, again, Tony Morrow. The original suggestion for the statue came from the diarist of the then Glasgow Herald, Tom Shields. Sadly, Tony Morrow passed away in 2021. Another Lobey Dosser character was the unnamed GI Bride. She would pop up occasionally in the strip carrying her infant child, seeking a lift back to Partick. It's highly appropriate, then, that her statue now stands on the main concourse at Partick Station in the west of the city. Ranald McColl was the sculptor; it was unveiled in 2011.

Writers are often self-effacing, and many would prefer to be commemorated by statues that depict their creations rather than themselves. And if their characters have earned a statue, they must have created something genuine and lasting. Some of Scotland's authors certainly have.
