The Banner Says...

The fascination of the Loch Ness Monster

by Sean Cairney

always remember my very first visit to Loch Ness in the Scottish Highlands and taking in the stunning scenery of the area and visiting the ruins of Urquhart Castle on the bonnie banks of the loch (a Gaelic word for lake). I also spent an above average amount of time skimming the loch for anything unusual in the cold and dark waters below. Of course, I was seeing if I would become world famous by being that person who spotted 'Nessie', something so many fail in year in and year out. Regardless of what you think is the true story of Nessie, our imagination and sense of 'what if' can take hold when you are looking out at the vast open water before you at Loch Ness.

Nessie

If you have yet to visit Loch Ness you may be surprised just how big it is, in fact it is the largest body of fresh water in all of the UK. With a depth of 788 feet/240 metres and a length of about 23 miles/36 km it is a vast and stunning body of water. And though Loch Lomond is larger and Loch Morar deeper than Loch Ness, this infamous loch contains more water than all the lakes of England and Wales combined!

However, the reason why Loch Ness is the most famous of Scotland's over 30,000 lochs is because of the mythical creature we all know as the Loch Ness Monster, or Nessie. Just recently the latest recording of a sighting of the monster was lodged for 2023. That now makes three claims of sightings to have taken place, in April, May and June from Scottish, American and French visitors. In 2022 six sightings were reported and you can read about each one and see any images to back up the claims at: www.lochnesssightings.com.

These recent sightings of course are not new, and the first reported dates go all the way back to 565AD when St Columba first saw the water beast and a legend was born. In our modern history nearly 1,200 sightings have been recorded and sightings really took off from the 1930s.

The legend

Not only has the legend of the Loch Ness monster fuelled our imaginations for generations, but it has also had a hugely positive impact to the local economy with estimates being the elusive monster brings in £41 million locally, with hotel nights, cruises, tours, tea towels, magnets and more.I even admit that before writing this article I did do my 'research' and scanned the waters, or should I say webcams, which you can watch at anytime at: www.visitinvernesslochness.com/livestream, should you have any better luck at 'Nessie hunting' from your home and spot something which could be the monster please do get in touch!

Loch Ness Monster is still searched for on Google and other search engines on the internet hundreds of thousands of times a year from people all over the world. The allure is still there and maybe it is fuelled by our imaginations and the love of the story, but I cannot think of any other country in the world who has a creature that sparks so much interest, yet most have never seen and even more likely not even believing in. To date no concrete evidence exists that Nessie is or was ever real, but that is ok as the legend is very much real.

In this issue

To locals it must feel like the world is descending on the streets of Edinburgh this month with all the Edinburgh festivals taking place. One of the premier events returning is The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo, we have some details of the cast line up and some images whet your appetite and whether you are attending in person or perhaps waiting to see it later in the year on the big screen or at home I hope you enjoy one of the world's greatest shows.

Should you happen to be in the Scottish capital over the next couple of months you may also wish to take a moment from the hustle and bustle and head to the Floral Clock. Located in West Princes Street Gardens and this year honouring the Flying Scotsman train it really is something to see, and smell, as you take in the world's oldest Floral Clock.

This month we have the third instalment from David C. Weinczok's favourite Scottish site series. This month David takes us far back in time to Scotland's early history focusing on sites from the Roman through Viking Ages, often a time we do not hear about in history and the fact a visitor to Scotland can still connect with it is amazing.

Truly magic

Over generations stories have circulated across the world of a mythical creature roaming the deep waters in the Scottish Highlands. Scotland is good at folklore, and this surely must be up there with one of its most famous tales. The monster is known the world over and has garnered the fascination of millions of people.

There is of course a benefit to Scotland that the idea of Nessie continues, but it is the fascination of the story that is truly magic. When I next visit the Highland beauty spot, I know I will join many alongside me having a look, just in case... it is something that we can all take part in and enjoy and that in of itself is truly special. 🗱

Floral Clock blooms in honour of 100 years of Flying Scotsman

Tork has finished to complete this year's design on the world's oldest Floral Clock in Edinburgh's West Princes Street Gardens. For 2023, the hugely popular landmark will celebrate 100 years of Flying Scotsman, the world's most famous steam locomotive. A team of three gardeners took just four weeks to plant over 50,000 flowers and plants used to create the clock, which will be in bloom until October.

There are 20 different plants included in this year's design such as antennaria, crassula, echevaria, sedum, saxifrage and annuals such as pyrethrum, begonias and geraniums.

The dedication of the clock coincided with a visit to the Capital from the iconic locomotive. The Lord Provost Robert Aldridge was joined by floral clock gardeners Gillian and David to welcome Flying Scotsman at Edinburgh Waverley. Edinburgh's Lord Provost Robert Aldridge said: "I am delighted to once again see the city's beautiful floral clock completed, and blooming in time for the special visit from Flying Scotsman. Each year the iconic clock marks special occasions and events in the heart of the Capital and this year it is a unique tribute coinciding with celebrations taking place around the country to celebrate 100 years of Flying Scotsman. My thanks and congratulations to the dedicated and creative parks team who have put together the design that I'm sure will be enjoyed by everyone who passes by it this summer."

For 2023, the hugely popular landmark will celebrate 100 years of Flying Scotsman, the world's most famous steam locomotive.

The oldest of its kind in the world
Edinburgh born Andrew McLean, National Railway Museum Assistant Director and Head Curator, said: "I first saw the clock when I was a boy and my grandfather was involved in helping maintain it as part of his job as the Clerk of Works for the City of Edinburgh Council from the late 1940s until the early 1980s. It is an important part of Edinburgh's history and was always a source of great pride so bringing the clock and Flying Scotsman together is a great joy for me."

The Floral Clock was first created in 1903 by then Edinburgh Parks Superintendent, John McHattie, and is the oldest of its kind in the world. It initially operated with just an hour hand, with a minute hand added in 1904, followed by a cuckoo clock in 1952. Until 1972 the clock was operated mechanically and had to be wound daily. Since 1946 it has been designed in honour of various organisations and individuals, including the Girl Guides Association, Robert Louis Stevenson and the Queen, for her Golden Jubilee. In the clock's centenary year in 2003 it won a Gold Medal at the RHS Chelsea Flower Show.

Flying Scotsman, the world's most famous steam locomotive, turned 100 in February 2023. Synonymous with the golden age of rail travel, the locomotive is renowned as a feat of design and engineering. It is a star attraction in the collection of the National Railway Museum (part of the Science Museum Group) in York, where it is a working museum exhibit.

New website launched to raise Midlothian's profile for visitors

To coincide with summer, a new website has been launched to raise Midlothian's profile and attract more visitors to the area. The site has been developed by Midlothian Tourism Forum with funding to help economic recovery following the Covid pandemic.

The new website for Midlothian
– www.visitmidlothian.co.uk – provides ideas for visitors looking for things to see and do, places to stay and places to eat and drink. It also includes inspiration for themed days out, such as dog walks, active adventures, tours and sites where the area has appeared on film and TV, as well as information on accessibility, transport and responsible tourism.

The website has been developed by Midlothian Tourism Forum, which is the only organisation bringing together representatives from local businesses, Midlothian Council and VisitScotland to develop and promote tourism across the area.

Ian Gardner, Chair of Midlothian
Tourism Forum, said: "I am delighted that we have reached this exciting stage of launching a brand new website to put Midlothian firmly on the map for visitors.
The site will provide ideas and inspiration for people, whether they are planning a break or just looking for a day out from home. People are often surprised by how much Midlothian has to offer and we hope that this website will be a valuable guide, helping both visitors and local businesses, throughout the year."

Did you know?

Floral Clock

- The clock was created in 1903 and is the oldest floral clock in the world.
- It is housed in the plinth of the Allan Ramsay Monument at the north-east corner of West Princes Street Gardens.
- Planting begins in May each year.
- Up to 50,000 plants are used in the design each year (compared to 13,000 in the 1930s; 25,000 in the 1950s).
- In 1946 the clock began celebrating a different event or anniversary each year.
- In 1952 a cuckoo clock was added and still chimes every 15 minutes.
- In 1973 was when the clock began being operated electrically.
- In 2003 the clock won a Gold Medal at the RHS Chelsea Flower Show.
- Clock circumference: 36 ft Clock width: 11 ft 10 ins Weight of large hand (when filled with plants): 80lbs. Weight of small hand (when filled with plants): 50lbs.
- Floral clocks are now distributed worldwide and many were made in Edinburgh, where the idea originated. They can be found in India, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, South America, United States of America, Canada and many other European countries.

Flying Scotsman

- Flying Scotsman was built in Doncaster in February 1923, as an A1 class locomotive for the newly formed LNER and converted to an A3 class in 1947 costing £7,944.
- It was the first locomotive of the newly formed LNER (London and North Eastern Railway). Designed by Sir Nigel Gresley and numbered 1472, the locomotive was not named Flying Scotsman until the following year when it was picked to attend the British Empire Exhibition in London and renumbered 4472.
- The locomotive went on to operate in service until 1963 and later in preservation, which included tours of the USA, Canada and Australia, where it captured the hearts of millions.
- The Flying Scotsman is officially the first steam locomotive to reach 100mph, and the first to circumnavigate the globe.
- It holds the world record for a non-stop run in a steam locomotive, set in 1989 with a 422-mile trip.
- Today the locomotive is owned by the National Railway Museum in York and is operated and maintained by Riley & Son (E) Ltd, based in Heywood, Greater Manchester.

Ever wanted to know what happened to your old pal from home, how to make your favourite Scottish meal, or wondered about a certain bit of Scottish history?

Scotland's zen garden

Thank you, Scottish Banner, for the story of the Japanese Garden at Cowden estate (Scotland's zen garden-The place of pleasure and delight, the Scottish Banner, May, 2023). I simply adore visiting gardens wherever I travel. Taking in the many varieties of plants on offer, getting a good walk and of course relaxing and connecting with nature. I travel to Scotland quite regularly and have for some reason never come across this garden before, so I greatly appreciate this article as I will now be adding the garden to my visit in September. The inspiration for the garden, Ella Christie, sounds like quite a remarkable woman and I will be sure to learn more about her as I am sure at the time many would have frowned their noses at her and her dream to create an Asian paradise in Scotland. Based on the photos in the article, Scotland is very fortunate Ella had such a vision and the property has been passed along to those who have seen her vision and executed it back to life for people to enjoy.

I love my Banner and finding articles like this confirms my enjoyment for each issue.

distant relative. I have visited the caste twice and thoroughly enjoyed the tours and felt the connection. I was reading David CWeinczok's article (Twelve years and over 400 castles later: My favourite Scottish castles) in the May issue of the Scottish Banner, great reading, and it inspired me to write in my favourite castle-Fyvie.

My least favourite castle would have to be Dunvegan Castle on Skye. Sorry to anyone connected to said castle. C. Bruce (a reader of 30 years) Jennings, NSW Australia

The Declaration of Arbroath

I absolutely love Scottish history so you can imagine my delight when I read about the Declaration of Arbroath (New Images for Declaration of Arbroath released, the Scottish Banner, May, 2023) being shown again in Scotland. My delight somewhat was reduced when I learned I would miss the viewing dates at the National Museum of Scotland. I will be in Edinburgh later this year, in September, and would have dearly loved to see such a historic document and one that is so very important to Scotland still today. I am very envious of those that did get to view it but do understand the document must be protected for future generations to enjoy. All being well I will travel back when it next goes on display, though if it is another 18 years to wait for the next showing I may be a bit slower by 2041!

Congratulations to all involved with the Scottish Banner.

The Scottish Borders

Reading the editorial in the June issue reminded me of a holiday which included a bus tour through the Borders. I grew up in the north-west suburbs of Sydney, NSW. My suburb was Baulkham Hills, part of the Hills district. This included such fun names as Rooty Hill and Toongabbie. Baulkham Hills was named after Buckholm Hill in the Borders, near Galashiels. I was struck just how similar the Hills District and the Borders are. I now live in Cooma where many Cleared Scots settled. They would boast that their rock strewn holding was their own and no one was going to throw them off it.

Thanks for the reminder of that memory, and your fine publication. Ian Clark Cooma, NSW Australia

dinburgh honoured the life of its second most famous canine with a special event. Greyfriars Bobby, the loyal terrier known for guarding his master's grave for 14 years after his death, is an iconic story in the Scottish capital and the Disney adaptation of his story in 1961 made a star of the acting pooch who portrayed the local hero – also called Bobby.

The remains of the Skye Terrier who starred in the film have been donated to The City of Edinburgh Council and now form part of its archaeology collections. They have been loaned to Greyfriars Kirk for a special exhibition commemorating the legacy near the real-life grave of Scotland's most loyal companion. At a ceremony in Greyfriars Kirkyard, Depute Lord Provost Lezley Marion Cameron was joined by David Hunter who led the campaign to commemorate the occasion as well as members of the church and friends of the graveyard.

'Let his loyalty and devotion be a lesson to us all'.

Depute Lord Provost Lezley Marion Cameron, said: "Greyfriars Bobby's memorial reads 'Let his loyalty and devotion be a lesson to us all'. Countless visitors continue to see Bobby's grave, his statue, and the many mementos of his life displayed in our Museum of Edinburgh. I'm delighted this further part of the iconic and timeless story of a little dog who would not leave his master's grave, is going to be on display for visitors to discover. Bobby's is a story held in enormous respect and affection by people around the world, as is the famous film it inspired. Bobby truly is a world-famous pet, holding a special place in people's hearts and it's lovely to be part of this special commemoration."

Rev Richard Frazer, minister of Greyfriars Kirk, said: "The story of Greyfriars Bobby goes on touching people's hearts. We are glad to remember this 'Bobby' who starred in Walt Disney's film. The search for his remains is a story in itself, but David's tenacity and persistence has paid off and now we have an additional item in our museum for people to visit, with a casket made in our Grassmarket Community Project workshop holding the ashes of the wee dog."

Greyfriars Kirk

The film pooch, a Skye Terrier and also called Bobby, was gifted to former Chief Constable of Lothian and Borders Police, William Merrilees, by Mr Walt Disney after the film was released. Following the film's release, Mr Walt Disney gave Bobby to his friend Chief Constable William Merrilees OBE. Mr Merrilees felt that it would be better if Bobby lived with a family, so he gave him to one of his senior officers - Chief Inspector John Turner. Bobby lived happily for the rest of his days with the Turner family in Morningside, Edinburgh. David Hunter, a relative of the Turner family, led a community campaign to find out what happened to Bobby and have his ashes interred at Greyfriars Kirk in Edinburgh.

Over the years the site of his grave had been lost. However, after hearing the site was to be developed for housing, with the permission of the developer, Mr Hunter and a team of volunteers undertook an 18-month search for his remains. As in all good stories his remains were finally found in the final days, in January 2023. A specially commissioned casket has been crafted from the wood of an old cherry tree that once stood in the Kirkyard. Designed and made by craftsmen from The Grassmarket Community Project. The casket and ashes were donated to the City of Edinburgh Council in 2023 and now form part of its archaeology collections and have been loaned to Greyfriars Kirk for

John Lawson, City of Edinburgh Council Archaeologist, said: "It's not often as an archaeologist that you work on such a unique project to preserve the remains of 1960's film star. It has been fantastic to work with David, the Kirk and Grassmarket Community and my colleagues in Bereavement Services on this project and to see the enthusiasm and care that everyone has shown in finding a fitting home for his remains."

The casket will be on display inside the Church together with information about the film and Bobby's charity work in the city and his life after the film.

The Scottish Banner is pleased to be offering the Tartan of the Month series highlighting a variety of different, unique and colourful tartans from around the world which are registered with the Scottish Register of Tartans in Edinburgh. The Scottish Register of Tartans was established by an act of the Scottish Parliament in November 2008 and promotes and preserves information about historic and contemporary tartans from Scotland and throughout the world. Text and image use are courtesy of the Scottish Register of Tartans (SRT).

his tartan was created to honour and remember those who have served in the Canadian Armed Forces Para Rescue, which been in operation since 1944. The Canadian Para Rescue is made up of specialist operators who originate from all of Canada's military environments Army, Navy & Airforce and all ranks and career fields. They are responsible to respond to all civilian air and marine emergencies and disasters throughout Canada's many austere environments and associated weather/climate conditions. This tartan is intended to celebrate the occupation's distinctness, rich history, strong traditions and the many risks associated and to honour the injured and those that paid the ultimate sacrifice, in the service of others. This tartan (reference: 13935) was designed by the Para Rescue Association of Canada and registered in June, 2023.

Scotspeak is a selection of quotes which made headlines in Scotland last month on a variety of current Scottish affairs.

"My journey will take me across the length and breadth of Scotland, across sea and lochs, from remote glens to the highest point in the United Kingdom; and across more miles of bog than I care to think about."

Athlete and climber Jamie Aarons said as she climbed all of Scotland's 282 Munros (mountains higher than 3,000 feet/914m) and set a new time record. Jamie completed the arduous task in 31 days 10 hours and 27 minutes, breaking the previous record by more than 12 hours.

"Imagine a hot summer in Scotland and no supplies of Irn-Bru, Scotland's other national drink, to quench raging Scottish thirsts. Well that's exactly what's on the horizon if the management of AG Barr don't revise their current wage offer to Unite members."

Unite general secretary Sharon Graham said the union has rejected a deal by Irn-Bru's parent company AG Barr. Supplies of Irn-Bru from the companies plant at Cumbernauld could be impacted after the union rejected an offer of a 5% pay increase.

"I am writing to you this morning following an update from the US Coast Guard. We are shocked and profoundly saddened by the death of Suleman Dawood and his father in this tragic incident. The entire Strathclyde community offers our deepest condolences to the Dawood family and all those affected by this terrible accident."

A statement from Professor Sir Jim McDonald, Principal & Vice-Chancellor, University of Strathclyde read as the Glasgow based business student was a passenger on a Titanic exploratory expedition. The 19-year-old and his father British/Pakistani businessman Shahzada Dawood 48, were among five people who perished on the Titan submersible off the coast of Newfoundland.

"Increased peatland restoration is vital to combat the climate and nature emergencies. Peatlands play such an important role in supporting our economic growth, improving our health and well-being, strengthening communities and reducing greenhouse gas emissions. We must continue to build on the results we've achieved with our many partners to put thousands of hectares of peatlands on the route to becoming a nature-rich, biodiverse and net zero Scotland."

NatureScot's Deputy Director of Green Economy, Claudia Rowse said the number of peatland hectares put on the road to recovery by NatureScot's Peatland ACTION team increased by 25% between 2022 and 2023 to 5,000 ha. Vital in the fight to tackle climate change, peat covers more than 20% of Scotland and is crucial for water quality, richly diverse landscapes, slowing floods and wildfires, sustaining rural jobs and storing carbon. Peatlands in Scotland are estimated to hold the equivalent of 185 years' worth of the country's total annual greenhouse gas emissions. However, 80% of the UK's peatlands - the majority of which are in Scotland - are estimated to be damaged and in need of restoration.

"For almost 1,000 years, the language of the people of Orkney was a variant of Old Norse, known as Norn, carried to the Northern Isles by Norwegian settlers. Norn remained the language of Orkney until the 15th century. It is thought that from the late 1500s to the early 1700s, most Orcadians were probably bilingual - speaking both Norn and Scots English. But gradually, cultural change in society, coupled with the economic changes, meant that the old tongue began to die out. But although the grammar and intricacies of Norn are now lost, a huge number of Norn words survived in the spoken dialect of Orkney. These words, generally relating to everyday life, remained in the following centuries."

Dr Tom Rendall said ahead of talk he gave at the Orkney Museum called "Aspects of Orkney Dialect", which delved into the Orkney Norn, linguistic features, the Viking legacy, words and expressions, dialect in poetry and cartoons and the future of the Orkney dialect. Spoken Orcadian is often regarded as having a sing-song lilt and to others many of the words and how they are used may seem like a foreign language. Most folk in Orkney will know that they are examples of Orkney dialect with words such as dilder, fleg, claa, deeskit, blide, rookel, rive and snirl.

"The fact that it was for charity work, or charitable giving, as well as the output of books was especially good because my wife and I have run a charitable foundation for quite a few years now but anonymously. Well, someone's outed us now, I guess. Someone must have put me forward for this."

Edinburgh author Ian Rankin said recently when he was knighted for services to literature and charity. Rankin is most known for his Rebus crime novels, which are mostly set in and around the Scottish capital. Sir Ian Rankin OBE FRSE was awarded a knighthood by the Princess Royal at Buckingham Palace on Tuesday 13 June 2023.

Queensland's Southern Downs plays host to three national championships during CelticFest 2023 in Warwick

he Southern Downs will play host to not one, but three national championships during CelticFest Warwick 2023, on the September long weekend (Sep 30-Oct 1). The Australian Highland Games Championships will be held at the main ticketed event at the Warwick Showgrounds. Meanwhile, as part of the CelticFest Fringe (separately organised and ticketed events, where applicable), SCOTS PGC College will host the inaugural Australian Juvenile Pipe Band Championships on Saturday 30 September, alongside the Australian Solo Piping and Drumming Championships on Friday 29 September.

Feats of strength

A field of 20 professional strongmen will battle it out for the Australian Highland Games Championships open men's title at the Warwick Showgrounds on the afternoon of Saturday 29 September and all-day Sunday 1 October. The strongman crowned Australia's national highland games champion will represent Australia at the World Amateur Highland Games Championships in Norway in March 2024. Previously the Australian Highland Games Championships had been held at The Gathering in Ipswich, but with that event taking a break for 2023, the search was on for another venue.

Championship organizer, Highland Muscle's Rob Mitchell, said that the decision to hold the event during CelticFest was due to the timing of the event, and the ability for CelticFest to hold a 'decent crowd'.

The latter is based on the outstanding reception for the highland games heavy events during CelticFest 2022 when the Portley Grandstand and surrounding area were packed with onlookers, reveling in the feats of strength from strongmen and women in events such as putting the stone, hammer throw, weight for height, and everyone's favourite, the caber toss.

By CelticFest, athletes will have competed in four qualifying events: The Hayland Gathering, Melbourne Highland Games and Celtic Festival, NSW Central Coast Highland Challenge, and the Australian Celtic Festival in Glen Innes. Each competitor placing top 3 in their division in these events automatically qualifies for the Australian Highland Games Championships.

There will be four divisions: Open Men's, Open Women's, Masters' Men's, and Men's under 90kg. Mitchell said all current champions will compete in Warwick - Terry Sparks (Open Men's), Fran Fitzpatrick (Open Women's), Stephen Henry (Master's Men's), and Morgan Westmoreland (Men's Under 90kg) – with around 25 athletes in total.

Other athletes to watch out for are Sian Cooper, Kalina Vikilani, and last year's Open Men's winner at CelticFest, Macauley Tinker. Mitchell himself is aiming for the Men's Master's crown after coming back from injury late last year.

Australian Juvenile Pipe Band Championships

The SCOTS PGC-hosted inaugural Australian Juvenile Pipe Band Championships will see some 15 school-based bands travel from around Australia to participate, including from as far afield as Perth. Confirmed participants include Presbyterian Ladies College Perth, Scotch College Melbourne and The Scots School Albury Pipe Band, which will join SCOTS PGC Pipes and Drums and Brisbane Boys College, among others.

SCOTS PGC is also planning recitals and workshops over the weekend with another expected highlight being the participation of Alisdair McLaren. McLaren is the current Pipe Major of the Pipes and Drums of the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo and the West Australia Police Pipe Band; he has also performed as the REMT'S Lone Piper, as well as for King Charles and the late Queen Elizabeth. In addition, SCOTS PGC College will host the Australian Solo Piping and Drumming Championships on Friday 29 September, showcasing some of the country's best pipers and drummers.

Excitingly, senior and junior pipe band players will join the Warwick Thistle Pipe Band as it celebrates its centenary year in a stirring spectacle of a street parade on the morning of Saturday 30 September. Coincidentally, SCOTS PGC will also celebrate 75 years of their kilted pipe band and is welcoming past students to march in this special event. The street parade is expected to attract around 300 performers. Meanwhile, tickets are now available for CelticFest, to be held at the Warwick Showgrounds on the evening of Saturday 30 September and all-day Sunday 1 October.

For more information about CelticFest and to purchase CelticFest tickets, go to www. celticfestqld.com.au or search for CelticFest Warwick on Eventbrite. Further details about CelticFest Fringe will also be available on the CelticFest website, Facebook page and Instagram account.

The King and Queen keep Scotland's stories alive on tenth anniversary visit to The Great Tapestry of Scotland

he Great Tapestry of Scotland, where the people's story of Scotland begins, has a new royal story to tell after Their Majesties The King and Queen visited the centre in the Scottish Borders. During the royal engagement, The Queen added the final stitch to a new panel commemorating the historic occasion. Their Majesties' visit to view one of the world's largest community arts projects in the town of Galashiels, coincided with the 10th anniversary of the Great Tapestry of Scotland's unveiling. The new panel is the first royal story to be added to the Tapestry since that time.

The King and Queen were welcomed by Mike Gray as Chair of the Tapestry Advisory Board and Centre Director Sandy Maxwell-Forbes, who introduced them to some of the thousand stitchers and wider team responsible for the creation of the Tapestry, including author Alexander McCall Smith who conceived the idea, artist Andrew Crummy (who was presented with an MBE), stitcher coordinator Dorie Wilkie, fundraiser and tour manager Jan Rutherford and historian and author Alistair Moffat, alongside representatives for architects Page/Park who designed the centre's award-winning building.

One of the world's longest tapestries Speaking after the visit, Sandy said: "It was the greatest honour to introduce The King and Queen to individuals who were instrumental in creating this compelling account of Scotland's history, heritage and culture and one of the nation's top-rated visitor experiences right here in Galashiels in the Scottish Borders. This marks a significant moment in the Tapestry's extraordinary success story. Their Majesties appeared to be moved by the Tapestry's compelling artwork. Indeed, The Queen described it as 'Absolutely Wonderful', she said she wished she had more time to take it all in. In keeping with the Tapestry's original ethos of allowing people to tell their own story in their own way, we were also thrilled that The King and Queen signed our commemorative certificate and Her Majesty added a stitch to our new panel. We specially designed the panel to reflect the significance of this royal visit and The Queen's own appreciation of embroidery, which was so evident in her stunning Couture Coronation gown, hand embroidered by the Royal School of Needlework. In keeping with the design of the dress and indeed The Great Tapestry of Scotland, there are some beautiful intricate hidden details stitched into the new panel which reflected The King and Queen's greatest interests in life including nature, wildflowers, The King's own book, The Old Man

Lochnagar and The Queen's Jack Russells Bess and Bluebell."

Now in its permanent home in the once thriving textile region of the Scottish Borders, The Great Tapestry of Scotland's 160 panels tell a visually compelling account of the people's story of Scotland from millions of years BC to present day. This includes key moments in royal history such as the stories of King Macbeth, St Margaret of Scotland, Mary Queen of Scots and her son James VI of Scotland and I of England, Queen Victoria and her particular love of Scotland, and Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II's Coronation.

The purpose-built Great Tapestry of Scotland visitor centre, with two galleries, café, workshop space and shop, opened in August 2021. One of the world's longest tapestries, hand stitched by a team of 1,000 stitchers led by Dorie Wilkie, The Great Tapestry of Scotland tells the visual story of Scotland's history, heritage and culture from its formation to present day.

♦ his month, set against the spectacular backdrop of Edinburgh Castle, the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo will welcome local and international audiences to their new show, Stories. Staged between 4-26 August, the show will be a celebration of sagas, myths, and legends, transporting audiences on a journey of ideas - from the earliest campfire stories through to the world stage. Building on last year's successful return show, Voices, the 2023 performance will showcase performers from around the globe, telling tales that connect us through our unique and shared military and cultural heritages.

Bringing together stories through music, dance, poetry, spoken word and imagery, a cast of over 800 UK and international performers will present Stories through a vivid and eclectic range of expression. From the musical prowess of the Massed Pipes & Drums, the physical storytelling of dance and precision drill, and stunning imagery captured through light and projection, audiences will be transported and enthralled.

Tattoo performers

This year The Tattoo Arena will host performers from Norway, The United States, Australia, Trinidad and Tobago, and Switzerland, alongside homegrown acts from across the UK and Ireland. As ever, the military will play a prominent role in the show, with the Royal Air Force the lead Service. Audiences will also be treated to the wild skirl of the Massed Pipes and Drums supported by the Tattoo Dancers and Fiddlers. Making their Tattoo debut on the Castle Esplanade, The United States Air Force Band will wow the crowds with a freestyle musical performance depicting America's great songbook, while the Trinidad and Tobago Defence Force Steel Orchestra will bring a vibrant burst of colour and the excitement of their traditional art forms, including the limbo and fire dance. Precision drill from the King's Colour Squadron will feature familiar soundscapes from the world of gaming. Exploring the legends and traditions of Switzerland, The Swiss Armed Forces Central Band will also present an exhilarating drum corps talent, which is sure to send sparks flying.

His Majesty the King's Guard Band and Drill Team of Norway will also be back to stun crowds. Their appearance this August will tell their story as a Regiment, reprising their history and heritage to present day. After their exuberant debut last year, Electro Pipes will return to the stage, where once again Tattoo performers will combine the traditional and new through EDM, electric instruments, lighting, and projection. The full line-up for 2023 includes: The Band of His Majesty's Royal Marines Scotland, The Central Band of the Royal Air Force, The Band of the Royal Air Force Regiment, The Royal Air Force Salon Orchestra, Royal Air Force Bands, 1st Battalion The Irish Guards Drums and Pipes, The Pipes and Drums of

The Royal Highland Fusiliers 2nd Battalion, The Royal Regiment of Scotland, The Pipes and Drums of 4th Battalion The Royal Regiment of Scotland, Combined Scottish Universities Officers' Training Corps Pipes and Drums, Royal Air Force Pipes and Drums, The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo Pipes and Drums, The Scots College Sydney Pipes and Drums, The Scots College Sydney Old Boys Pipes and Drums, The Scots School Albury Pipe Band, The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo Dancers, The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo Fiddlers, King's Colour Squadron Royal Air Force, The Swiss Armed Forces Central Band, His Majesty the King's Guard Band and Drill Team of Norway, The United States Air Force Band and Trinidad and Tobago Defence Force Steel Orchestra.

Embraces military tradition 2023 marks the second year of the Tattoo's bold new brand proposition, Performance in a New Light, which embraces military tradition and combines it with exciting new innovations and contemporary touches. Buster Howes, the Chief Executive of The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo, said: "The Tattoo is distinctive, iconic, and gleeful. It has mass, momentum and energy, and Stories will have all these qualities as well as being whimsical, exhilarating, and surprising. Our lives, loves, triumphs, and disasters are captivated and documented in stories. We grow up with fairy tales and folklore, with Winnie the Pooh and The Gruffalo, and progress to Wuthering Heights and Moby Dick. We are, as children, inspired by accounts of resilience, adventure and heroism; universal themes reinterpreted the world over. Edinburgh Castle is surely a perfect backdrop for all such narratives come and see for yourselves.

7 elements that create an amazing Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo

The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo is one of the most iconic events in the Edinburgh festivals calendar. Bringing together audiences from across the globe, the Tattoo celebrates the skills and talents of military bands and display teams from across the globe. There are few such moving festival moments, a fact to which any of the over 220,000 people who experience it live in any normal year can attest - not to mention the further 100 million who watch television broadcasts of the event! So, what makes it so special?

- 1. The unique setting-It's not often that you get a chance to sit in a specially built arena with a castle as your backdrop. But that's what makes the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo unique. Edinburgh Castle is one of the oldest fortified places in Europe, and magically sits on a hilltop overlooking Scotland's capital city. With a long rich history as a royal residence, military garrison, prison and fortress, it is alive with many exciting tales. When you walk up Castle Hill to get to your seats, you will walk in the footsteps of soldiers, kings and queens – and even the odd pirate or two. Though parts of the Castle remain in military use, the castle is now a world-famous visitor attraction and an iconic part of the Old and New Towns of Edinburgh World Heritage Site.....while also being the stunning backdrop for The Tattoo.
- 2. The legendary tradition-Did you ever wonder where the term 'Tattoo' comes from? Well, it derives - from a 17th century Dutch phrase doe den tap toe ("close the tap"), a signal to tavern owners each night, played by regimental drummers, to turn off the taps of their ale kegs so that the soldiers would go back to their lodgings. With the establishment of modern barracks and full military bands later in the 18th century, the term "tattoo" was used to describe the last duty call of the day, as well as a ceremonial form of evening entertainment especially amongst Scottish regiments. The first public military tattoo in Edinburgh was entitled "Something About a Soldier" and took place in 1949 at the Ross Bandstand in the Princes Street Gardens and the first official Edinburgh Military Tattoo, with eight items in the programme, was the held in 1950 with 6.000 spectators seated in simple bench and scaffold structures around the Castle esplanade.

- 3. The Massed Pipes & Drums-There are surely only a few worldwide events that can boast of such a spectacular scene as the Massed Pipes and Drums marching out through the gates of Edinburgh Castle onto the Esplanade for the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo. At every show, the Massed Pipes and Drums - several hundred strong - march in traditional uniform and bellow out their best tunes on the bagpipes and drums. Each member moves with impeccable discipline, precision and choreographic prowess, creating a captivating spectacle that's bound to impress and not to be missed! The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo Pipes and Drum, Dancers and Fiddlers, have been developed to promote traditional Scottish art forms, ensuring that these cultural identities are shared internationally
- 4. The international flavour-Although UK and Scottish acts lie at the heart of the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo, it would not be the same extraordinary spectacle without the international performers that form part of a cast of more than 1,200 performers from all points of the compass that grace the Castle esplanade every August. In 1952 The Tattoo

- introduced the first overseas performers: The Pipes and Drums of the 1st Canadian Highland Battalion, La Fanfare à Cheval de La Garde Republicaine de Paris and The Koninklijke Militaire Kapel (Royal Netherlands Grenadiers) all performed. The 2022 programme included Banda Monumental de Mexico, the New Zealand Army Band, the United States Air Force Honor Guard Drill team and firm Tattoo favourites the Top Secret Drum Corps from Basel, Switzerland. Every year, there's an amazing array of talented musicians from across the globe.
- 5. The Lone Piper-The Lone Piper has a significant role during the August shows. An iconic silhouette from the top of Edinburgh Castle, they mark the close of festivities and a moment to remember those that came before us. For centuries pipers and drummers have held an important role within the military. Marking calls to action throughout the day, performing at celebrations and keeping morale up during times of conflict. In addition to their daily soldiering duties, a Lone Piper will play their pipes to signify routine commands. Each call has a different tune, that the Battalion will recognise and understand. At the Tattoo, The Lone Piper is a key part of the performance marking a poignant moment of reflection and signifying the end of the night. In addition to learning music by heart, the piper must have a stomach for heights as they stand hundreds of feet above the Edinburgh Castle Esplanade. Before the times of health and safety the role included true jeopardy with pipers standing on a small platform next to a sheer drop. Nowadays, the Lone Piper is securely harnessed to a custom-built platform ensuring their safety at all times.
- 6. The stunning projections-From first exploring the medium of large format projections in 2005, the recent state-of-the-art video projection systems now allow the Tattoo to reach new heights in brightness, visibility and creativity - underlining the commitment to bringing the highest production

- values to the whole Tattoo experience. With the move to video and the greater intensity, the latitude for content has greatly increased. For New Zealand's Lochiel Marching Drill Team the city landmark became Mordor - complete with flowing rivers of lava, fire-breathing dragons, smouldering volcanoes and cracking buildings. For a Battle of Jutland theme, the video complement included 3D battle cruisers and the castle morphed into the engine room of a Dreadnaught battleship. In complete contrast, the US Army Band Europe played against a castle covered in animated stars and stripes and musical notes. The spectacular large-format projections that now grace Edinburgh Castle create a dramatic and dynamic backdrop for the Tattoo each year.
- 7. The fireworks finale-No festival extravaganza would be complete without a fireworks finale, and the Tattoo is no different. But there is actually a big difference because the Tattoo holds a display every night to mark the end of the performance, with the entire cast gathering on the esplanade. For those at the event, this is one of those picture-perfect moments with the fireworks framing the iconic Edinburgh Castle. If you're not at the Tattoo you can still enjoy the fireworks from nearly anywhere in the city, with most vantage points taken up by those locals who know the best places and the exact times (roughly 90 minutes after the start of each show).

The Tattoo is a hugely popular, near month-long theatrical extravaganza showcasing an exciting and eclectic mix of military pageantry, music, dance, technical wizardry and special effects. So, as you can see, this is one event not to be missed.

Have you attended the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo, share your story with us! This year's Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo takes place from 4th to 26th August, to find out more information and buy tickets see: www.edintattoo.co.uk

IN SCOTLAND TODAY

Orkney to consider alternative models of governance

Orkney Islands Council has voted in favour of considering other forms of governance, such as looking at the possibility of becoming a British overseas territory (such as the Falkland Islands) or even looking to its historic link to Norway or Denmark and becoming part of those Nordic nations.

Another option being considered is Crown Dependencies like that of Jersey, Guernsey and the Isle of Man. The Crown Dependencies are not part of the UK but are self-governing dependencies of the Crown. Councillors feel both the UK and Scottish Government's short change Orkney in funding support, claiming Orkney receives less funding per head from Government than other island authorities such as Shetland and the Western Isles. The motion read: "Due to historical and contemporary challenges in relation to equitable capital and revenue funding, and policy support across our island communities, Orkney Islands Council should now explore options for alternative models of governance that provide greater fiscal security and economic opportunity for the islands of Orkney. Those investigations to include Nordic connections, crown dependencies and other options for greater subsidiarity and autonomy to be presented to the community for consideration." The UK Government has rejected the notion and a spokesperson for the Prime Minister said: "First and foremost there is no mechanism for the conferral of Crown Dependency or Overseas Territory status on any part of the UK. We have no plans to change the devolution settlement we are supporting Orkney with £50m to grow the economic prosperity of the Scottish islands, through the islands deal. But the government's position is that the UK is stronger united."

Orkney was under Norwegian and Danish control until 1472 when it became part of Scotland as part of Margaret of Denmark's wedding dowry to King James III of Scotland.

Edinburgh shines as King Charles III is presented with the Honours of Scotland

King Charles III was presented with the Honours of Scotland during a national service of thanksgiving at St Giles' Cathedral on July 5th. Thousands gathered along the length of the Royal Mile where the King and Queen led a Royal Procession from the Palace of Holyroodhouse to St Giles' Cathedral. There was also a People's Procession from Edinburgh Castle to St Giles' Cathedral, involving around 100 people representing different aspects of Scottish life, accompanied by a military escort and cadet force bands. Following the service there was a 21 Gun Salute from Edinburgh Castle and a flypast by the RAF's Red Arrows.

The Lord Lieutenant of the City of Edinburgh, Robert Aldridge said: "I was delighted and honoured to welcome His Majesty King Charles III and Queen Camilla upon their arrival in Edinburgh on Monday, and to undertake the historic Ceremony of the Keys on behalf of the city. Today we saw the Honours of Scotland, the most ancient set of crown jewels in Britain, bestowed upon King Charles III. We also saw people from all walks of life coming together in a spirit of unity and celebration. The eyes of the world were upon us once again and it was wonderful to see Edinburgh looking its best with the streets of our historic Old Town lined with thousands of well-wishers. I'm proud that our great city has once again played its part exceptionally in the duties and responsibilities we hold as the capital of Scotland."

Historic sword returns to National Wallace Monument

The fabled Wallace Sword, one of Scotland's greatest treasures, is back where it belongs in Stirling. The 13th century blade, believed to have been used by William Wallace at the Battle of Stirling Bridge in 1297, was returned to the National Wallace Monument.

It was removed from the popular tourist attraction in March after an alleged attack on the display case in which the two-handed blade, which is 1.68m long and weighs around 3kg, was housed. Thankfully, the sword was not damaged, but specialist designers from manufacturers Click Netherfield in Livingston had to construct a new showcase at a cost of £10,000. The new showcase includes anti-reflective, almost-invisible glass which provides an unrestricted view of the legendary sword and its intricate surface to visitors. Stirling Council Leader, Cllr Chris Kane, said: "The Wallace Sword is the iconic showpiece of the National Wallace Monument, celebrated by visitors from every corner of the globe.

The Monument attracts more than 100,000 visitors every year and we were extremely disappointed the sword had to be moved to safe storage as a result of actions outwith our control. For many visitors, viewing the sword in such revered and spectacular surroundings is the highlight of their visit. Stirling is a major tourist destination, recognised internationally for its heritage, historic and vibrant city and fabulous scenery. We're delighted, as we head into the main tourist season, to once again display the sword in all its glory in its natural home."

The National Wallace Monument was completed in 1869, and it was opened to visitors for the first time on 11th September, the anniversary of Wallace's victory at The Battle of Stirling Bridge in 1297. At the time of its completion, the total amount which had been spent on the construction of the Monument was £13,401. The Sword was moved to the Monument in 1888, 19 years after the Monument first opened in 1869. Charles Rodgers, a principle fundraiser for the Monument, had been trying to move the Sword to the Monument since its completion, but his request was refused by the Colonel of the Royal Artillery at Dumbarton Castle in 1875 and it wasn't until 1888 that the War Office agreed to transfer the Sword, a decision met by protests in the town of Dumbarton.

Updated designs for George Street and First New Town project

A final operational plan for Edinburgh's George Street and First New Town (GNT) project was approved by members of the Transport and Environment Committee along with updates to the proposed design. A key change is the introduction of trees on George Street, which has been agreed following discussions with Edinburgh World Heritage, Historic Environment Scotland, the Cockburn Association and other stakeholders. This recognises trees' contribution to the city's Net Zero 2030 goals as well as their capacity to enhance the street's biodiversity value, helping to combat urban heat island effects and supporting our One Million Tree City pledge.

Following the approval of proposals, the Council will continue to work closely with partners to determine the appropriate position, number and type of trees to be added. Committee members approved updates to the principles of the proposed GNT Operational Plan which include plans for the creation of a pedestrian and cycling zone where loading, servicing and licensed taxi access on George Street will only be permitted during evening and morning hours. At this stage, automated bollards will provide additional public safety measures and enforce the pedestrian cycling zone restrictions.

Amongst the 'core elements' of the design are significantly widened pavements, the creation of a European style cycling street and the removal of parking bays. The next stage for the project will be to progress the promotion of all the necessary statutory processes for George Street, which provide the powers to enable the construction of the project, scheduled for 2025.

Stuart Hay, Director, Living Streets Scotland said: "Edinburgh is currently one of the least pedestrianised historic cities in Northern Europe, so we are delighted to see progress in the plans for a place that prioritises people, not cars. George Street has the potential to become the heart of the city, creating a much-needed public space of high quality."

Testing pilot trial now underway for Orkney cancer gene link

Community testing is now underway in the Orkney outer isle of Westray for a gene variant that causes a higher risk of developing breast and ovarian cancer. The variant in the gene BRCA1 was linked to a historic origin in Westray by leading geneticists from the Universities of Aberdeen and Edinburgh, who published their findings in the European Journal of Human Genetics in March. Now, a small pilot trial organised by NHS Grampian and funded by the Westray Development Trust is offering testing for the variant to anyone living in Westray with a Westray-born grandparent. If the pilot is successful the long-term aim is to offer the test to everyone in Scotland with a Westray-born grandparent, then to assess which more distant relatives should be offered a test. Currently in Scotland the test is only available to Westray residents, those who know of a direct family connection to the BRCA1 gene, or have a significant history of ovarian or breast cancer in their family.

Zosia Miedzybrodzka, Professor of Medical Genetics at the University of Aberdeen and Director of the NHS North of Scotland Genetic Service, led the research that established the Westray link to the BRCA1 variant with Professor Jim Wilson from the University of Edinburgh. Welcoming the launch of the pilot trial, Professor Miedzybrodzka said: "I am grateful to every single person that has made this pilot happen. We are setting up a system that will hopefully extend to the rest of Orkney and Scotland as soon as funding allows. The NHS Grampian genetics clinic and lab teams are delighted to offer this pioneering new service to Westray residents which will improve care and save lives. I am grateful to every single person that has made this pilot happen. We are setting up a system that will hopefully extend to the rest of Orkney and Scotland as soon as funding allows."

A series of FAQs and short video explainers which are available on NHS Grampian's website: www.nhsgrampian. org/BRCA1.

KINGS CASTLES AND"DURTY" WEE RASCALS

Australian Jim Stoddart was born in a Glasgow Tenement and raised in a Glasgow Housing Scheme 1943-1965. Jim will be taking readers on a trip down memory lane, of a time and place that will never be the same again and hopes even if only a few people in the Scot's Diaspora have a dormant folk memory awakened, then he shall be more than delighted.

The Battle of Largs

We call our ships by many names: 'snakes of the seas', 'surf dragons' and 'fjiord elkes'. The seas they sail upon we call 'the whale's road', 'eel home', fish's bath' and 'Njord's hall'. Many things may befall you upon the whale's road so take care. Make offerings to the sea lord Njord before leaving land. Carve runes of protection upon your oars and your mast. Ask Thor for fair weather. Be wary of monsters for many dwell in the murk of deep sea halls. Serpents and sea trolls sink many ships so muster the power of some mighty runes before setting sail.

Seafarer's Lore from 'How to be a Viking' by Art Berk.

'n 1262 AD, the King of Scotland, Alexander III when scarcely more than a boy, launched a desperate bid to recover the Western and Northern Isles of Scotland from the King of Norway, Haakon IV. The Scots kings were no longer prepared to tolerate Norse occupation of any part of their kingdom. In 1196 Alexander's grandfather, King William the Lion, had thrown the Vikings out of northern Scotland. Alexander III was one of Scotland's better kings, said to be good and wise. He stirred up various Highland nobles such as the Earl of Ross to make war upon the island chiefs on behalf of their King. The chiefs turned to King Haakon for his military assistance to combat the Earl of Ross's incursions in to what they considered were their lands.

Haakon decided to retaliate against the Scottish king. The subsequent invasion and vicious raids by Haakon upon Loch Long and Loch Lomond were almost certainly his response to Alexander's bold initiative to take territory back from him and his Norwegian Empire. Having sailed up Loch Long Haakon was able to take the local populace of Loch Lomond by surprise by rolling his longships over the narrow strip of land between the sea loch and the land-locked Loch Lomond, at what to us is now called Tarbert. There was much slaughter there as a consequence.

Large

At Largs my extended family often took their evening walks along the esplanade toward the Googie Burn and the Pencil Monument, called that simply because of its shape and built to commemorate the Battle of Largs, fought near there in 1263. My father talked of a great battle having taken place. He spoke of King Alexander III, high on the Renfrewshire hills behind Largs, watching Haakon's fleet of 120 or so longships beating a passage from the Mull of Kintyre and Lorne, toward the Isle of Bute to finally anchor off the coast of Arran.

Eventually the fleet lay off the Cumbraes readying to land at Largs. He continued with the conventional story that Alexander and his army strategically lay in wait with his hidden forces at a place that came to be called Camphill lying in those hills.

And went on to say that when Haakon launched his dragon ships upon the coast his Viking crews were met head on and repulsed by Alexander's cavalry and foot soldiers in a bloody and victorious battle.

The Battle of Largs was a very significant turning point in Scotland's history.

That was my father's version of events; however some historians describe it very differently. They talk of an aging and tired King Haakon bringing his large fleet of longships in an attempt to halt what he saw as Scottish imperialism against his Western Isles Kingdom and his loyal island chiefs. He had bargained on the support of Angus, the chief of the powerful Clan Donald.

But Haakon was outsmarted because Alexander held Angus's son hostage and so Angus was unable to help. Unfortunately for Haakon, he had already delayed too long in making his way through the Western Isles towards Largs. Alexander now wasted another month of Haakon's time in 'negotiation' while Haakon's unruly men became bored, and discipline became slack. They took to raiding the Ayrshire coast for something to do to fill in their time. Some historians even suggest that Alexander, rather sneakily, delayed Haakon's progress by sending friars to pretend to negotiate a treaty but in reality meaning to prolong him further toward the season of autumn gales. How they got aboard his ships without getting a battleaxe though their heads is not mentioned. Nevertheless, these gales are said to have played havoc with Haakon's fleet as it lay in the Firth of Clyde and the autumn storms are said to have wrecked many of his ships before they ever got on to the coast at Largs. Haakon had dithered too long and on the fateful night of the 1st of October 1262 a great storm came in from the west and pushed his longboats toward the coast whether they liked it or not. Haakon was forced to order a difficult landing. With much of his invasion fleet already scattered some longboats got smashed on the shore and many of his men were drowned.

Significant effect upon Scottish history

Some historians would have us further believe that Haakon and his bedraggled Viking warriors, those who had survived this disaster, stumbled ashore at Largs, completely exhausted, to have to face King Alexander and his army including 1,500 armoured cavalry, charging toward them along the shoreline. In the course of a rather confused engagement Haakon's men were defeated on both the land and the sea to ave to withdraw in disorder. The Scot's army, then supposedly, politely withdrew to allow the weary Norwegian Vikings, short of food and supplies, never mind fighting spirit, to fall back, retreat and sail away, back by the way they had come. What is known for sure is that Haakon, no matter whether defeated soundly in battle or not, or simply a poor wee king in distress, no longer had the heart and stomach for a future confrontation.

Completely disheartened by this turn of events he apparently sailed back to Norway with what remained of his fleet, stopping off on the way in Kirkwall, in the Orkneys, only to take ill, sccumb to fever and die there.

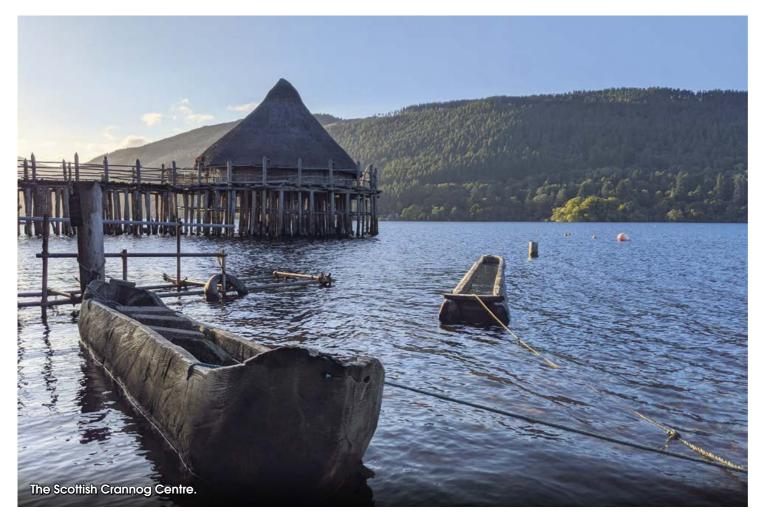

No matter what the truth is about the Battle of Largs. It had a long-term and very significant effect upon Scottish history. Within three years by the Treaty of Perth, made with Magnus, Haakon's successor the Western Isles and the Isle of Man passed back by sale to the Scots, whilst the Northern Isles, the Orkney and Shetland Islands remained in Norwegian hands as part of the Viking empire. In 1283 King Eric of Norway, was married to King Alexander's daughter, Margaret to put a seal on the peace treaty of twenty years before.

Then tragically within a short time the popular King Alexander died at Kinghorn in Fife when riding up a cliff path in fog to join his young wife. He was found dead at the foot of a precipice. His wife, his daughter and his other children were all dead, one after another within a short time. His surviving three-year-old grand-daughter, Margaret, the Maid of Norway, became heir to the Scottish throne as her infant queen. In turn this child's untimely death in Orkney led to a dynastic crisis which de-stabilised Scotland, destroyed the relative peace between England and Scotland and began Scotland's exploitation by England's Edward I and ultimately to the Wars of Independence. The Battle of Largs was therefore a very significant turning point in Scotland's history whether it followed the battle script of my father, spoken to me on those delightful evening walks to the Pencil Monument or that based upon the research of more qualified historians regarding that fatal day in 1253.

My 5 Favourite Early Historic Sites

reviously, I shared five of my favourite Scottish medieval castles and five of my favourite ancient sites. Now, it's time to pick five from the somewhat awkward middle child, the Early Historic period. You may be more familiar with the term 'Dark Ages', though that's now parlance of the past as more and more is being illuminated by archaeologists and historians.

The parameters of this period are somewhat subjective, with no firm start or end date to anchor it to. In broad strokes, I think of it as encompassing the Roman invasions of Scotland in the first century AD through to the height of the Viking Age in the tenth century. In that time, some things changed drastically when compared with earlier periods, while many of the fundamental rhythms of daily life remained very similar to those in the Iron Age. It may be one of the more 'obscure' and less well-understood periods of our history, but it gave Scotland its essential shape – both literally and figuratively – and there are plenty of remnants of it to explore.

Rough Castle, Falkirk

Don't let the name deceive you - Rough 'Castle' is more than twice as old as any actual castle in Scotland. It is the name of the Roman fort constructed along the Antonine Wall to the west of what is now Falkirk. The Antonine Wall ran for 40 miles from Carriden in the east to Old Kilpatrick in the west, cutting Scotland horizontally in two along the Forth-Clyde line. Its defences were made of earth and timber upon a stone foundation, hence why it has not survived as well as sections of Hadrian's Wall. The lands between the two Roman walls was populated by Brittonic tribes who responded to the arrival of Rome with varying degrees of hostility and diplomacy. While the legions marched and built forts much further north than this – possibly as far as the Moray Firth – it is thrilling to stand on the steep-sloped embankments of Rough Castle knowing that this is where, as far as Rome was concerned, civilisation ended and the unfathomable wilds began.

The scale of the wall's ditch at Rough Castle is vivid thanks to the open ground around it. In one section, a staggered set of oval-shaped pits are still perfectly visible. These lilia were fitted with wooden spikes to slow down any attack on the wall itself. Rough Castle also boasted stone buildings including a bath house, granary, and officer's quarters. All that effort was for nought, however – the Antonine Wall was occupied for a mere 20 years, between 140 – 160 AD, before it was abandoned for a surer, more southerly frontier.

Midhowe Broch, Rousay

As with my choices for my favourite prehistoric sites, Orkney could have monopolised this list. Even choosing just one Orcadian broch is a challenge – the Broch of Gurness is the best-known and obvious pick, or maybe the Broch of Borwick spectacularly sited on the high cliffs of Yesnaby. Yet there's just something about Midhowe Broch, along the Wesness shore in Rousay, that can't be beat. Perhaps it's the sheer gauntlet of history around it that adds to the appeal. Within a ten-minute walk of Midhowe is a Viking-age cemetery, a medieval church, the multi-period site of Swandro, and the gigantic, Neolithic chambered cairn which shares the name of Midhowe, as well as natural stone arches and breathtaking views across the Eynhallow Sound. Or maybe it's the broch's construction itself. One of at least eleven brochs which once lined the shores of the Sound, Midhowe Broch is built between two geos, narrow clefts in the coastal rocks. Razor-like upright stones line its exterior, and a sea wall built with a distinctive technique called cassying makes the whole site appear incredibly powerful in the face of the lashing sea. A community thrived here for several centuries on either side of the BC/AD divide. Though the exact nature of their lives will likely never be known, whenever I visit Midhowe I always take time to sit at the edge of the central hearth, stare through the tall, narrow passageway framing the sea, and feel a moment of unity with them.

How lucky we are to have such places to instil wonder in the past, and inspire us into the future.

The Scottish Crannog Centre, Loch Tay

Crannogs, or at least crannog sites, are instantly recognisable on countless lochs and brackish shores around Scotland. If you see a small, circular islet in a loch, usually with a few trees growing on it, and no other islands immediately around it, there's a good chance it once hosted a crannog. The Scottish Crannog Centre is on the northeast shore of Loch Tay, which had one of the densest concentrations of crannogs known anywhere. The debate continues to rage about what crannogs were meant for. They emerge in the Early Bronze Age, and some were inhabited well into the Middle Ages. The timber stilts on which their foundations rested imply a measure of defence, yet crannogs were not otherwise fortified. Theories range from population pressures on the land to crannogs functioning as community strengthening exercises, given that it took hundreds of huge timbers and tens of thousands of hours of labour to build one.

The result is a little like the overwater bungalows you see in glossy travel ads set in Polynesia – not the first thing you expect to see on a Highland loch! The Scottish Crannog Centre has a museum dedicated to the material culture of crannogs, as well as a miniature crafts village where visitors can work a lathe, taste a 2,000 year-old recipe for garlic bread, and experience many other hands-on approaches to learning history. Tragically, the replica crannog itself was destroyed in an accidental fire in June 2021. However, with renewed purpose the Crannog Centre has already begun constructing not one, but three replica crannogs on the opposite side of the loch. Once complete, Loch Tay will have a veritable Early Historic makeover.

Dunino Den, East Fife

Some places have a certain air about them - a pinch of mystery, a bit of playfulness, a hint of foreboding. Few places exude it quite as potently as Dunino Den, a few miles south of St Andrews. A ritual centre for well over 2,000 years, it can be dead still on a gusty day and brooding dark on a sunny one. And, just when you think you've settled in, you see the stone face watching you. Tucked in a gully alongside Dunino Parish Church, Dunino Den is now used as a clootie well where people tie strips of cloth to tree branches and leave personal mementos, often in memory to those who departed this world too soon, in its soils. During the height of the COVID-19 pandemic, I even found a face mask strung to a small stump – truly, a symbolic merger of modernity and antiquity if ever there was one. Atop a pulpit-like stone projection which overlooks the gully is a deep, water-logged hole, the bottom of which I've never been able to reach even with a very long branch. A narrow stone stair carved into the pulpit descends into the Den itself, with numerous Early Christian crosses carved into the smooth stone wall beside you. More often than not, Christianity did not so much erase the old pagan gods as they co-opted them - a healing well previously dedicated to a pagan deity would just be swapped for a similar saint, for instance. The most striking carving in the den is a small but incredibly stern and ominous face, its heavy-set eyes and long beard guarding the Den like an elemental sentinel.

Fans of Game of Thrones will instantly relate it to the faces carved in the sacred Weirwood trees in northern strongholds like Winterfell. And yet, this is no ancient visage but a strikingly modern one. Locals insist that the carving only appeared in the last thirty or forty years, which goes to show that not all at Dunino Den is what it first seems.

Dumbarton Rock, West Dunbartonshire

Along the otherwise placid banks of the River Clyde, the twin crags of Dumbarton Rock stick out of the landscape like a double-exclamation. Quite possibly the oldest continually fortified site anywhere in Britain, this was once the capital of the Strathclyde Britons, the children of the Rock. A history of Dumbarton Rock reads like an abridged history of Scotland. Its inhabitants watched with trepidation as the Romans built the westernmost outpost of the Antonine Wall just a few miles upstream. In the last few decades of the fourth century, they would have participated in overrunning that grand symbol of empire in what Roman historians called the 'Barbarian Conspiracy'. In 870 a vast Viking fleet led by Ivar the Boneless besieged Dumbarton Rock - then called Dùn Breatann - for months until its water supplies ran dry.

The Britons were enslaved and sold in Dublin markets, though some fled and made their way to their kindred in Wales. Another indignity seized

Dumbarton when its governor, Sir John de Menteith, captured William Wallace and held him within the castle before sending him to London to be tried and executed. It was also from Dumbarton that a six year-old Mary, Queen of Scots, set sail for France to marry the dauphin. Much nearer our own time, gun emplacements were set atop the rock to shoot down Nazi bombers aiming for the industrial and shipbuilding heartland of the Clyde. All of this makes a deep well of imagination and contemplation to draw from while resting at its top. My favourite place to sit is on the smoothened stones on The Beak, the taller of the two crags. I imagine Ivar the Boneless triumphantly placing one foot upon the highest stone; Wallace shouting traitor! to his captor; a young Mary determined not to cry as her feet left Scottish soil. And here you can be, in the footsteps of them all. How lucky we are to have such places to instil wonder in the past, and inspire us into the future.

Letting off Steam

he vast majority of the world's population are aware that it was the brainchild of Scots engineer and inventor James Watt (1736-1819), while watching the action of steam from a boiling kettle of water, that eventually led to the steam engine which would, in turn, spark the Industrial Revolution. But to his aunt, the young James Watt appeared like similar idle teenagers wasting his time as he silently stared at her kettle and toyed with the condensed water drops. Although, as she continually reprimanded him for what to her was a wasteful habit, little did she realise her nephew was paving the way for his invention of the steam engine.

And just to verify the foundation of his genius a first-hand account of the kettle incident of 1751 came to light in a letter from the inventor's cousin Marion Campbell, who had witnessed her mother, Jane Muirhead, lecturing the fifteen-year-old Watt.

In her historical report Mrs Campbell relates how she and her mother sat at the tea table in their home in Greenock observing a young Watt seemingly wasting his time gazing at the actions of a boiling kettle. She relates how her mother remarked, "Jamie Watt, I never saw such an idle boy, take a book or employ yourself usefully. For the last hour you haven't spoken one word, but taken the lid off that kettle and put it on again, holding now a cup, and now a silver spoon over the steam watching how it rises from the spout and catching and counting the drops of hot water it falls into." She added, "It appears that when thus blamed for idleness, his mind was employed in investigating the properties of steam." The letters eventually went to auction in 2002 following the passing of Watt's great-great-great-grandson Lord Gibson-Watt.

James Watt was not only the most prolific innovator imaginable, but he also possessed one of the greatest minds of his time.

Scots mastermind

James Watt was born in Greenock, Renfrewshire, in 1736, the son of a ship's chandler and town councillor. In 1754 he moved to Glasgow to learn the skills of a mathematical-instrument maker and after moving to London he set up business. What many people don't realise is that he was employed on surveys for the Forth and Clyde Canal as well as the Caledonian and other prominent canals. He was also accountable in the upgrading of many harbours and in the deepening of the Forth, the Clyde and several other rivers. But his main fascination was always his desire to put steam to use as a motive force and, in 1763/4 a working model of the Newcomen engine was sent to him for hopeful inspection and repair.

He restored it to perfection and, utilising the imperfections of the machine, he hit upon the probabilities of the separate condenser. Soon to follow were revolutionary advancements to the air pump, the cylinder and the double-acting engine. After settling in Birmingham in 1774 he soon superseded Newcomen's machine and went on to create the expansion principle, the double engine, the parallel motion, the smokeless furnace and the governor.

The watt, a unit of power, was named after him, while the term horsepower, another unit, was first used by him. Watt was key in also developing the rotary engine which mechanised weaving, spinning and transport. James Watt passed away in Birmingham in 1819 at aged 83 and during 1899 his belongings, including his library and papers, were moved to Doldowlod House in Radnorshire, the Welsh estate of his descendant Lord Gibson-Watt.

When the Scots mastermind's papers went on sale a spokesperson for the London auction house maintained that people associate Newton with the apple, Bruce with the spider, and Watt with the kettle. He nominated Watt's discovery as the most illustrious and, but for him, and his visions, the Industrial Revolution might never have taken place. James Watt was not only the most prolific innovator imaginable, but he also possessed one of the greatest minds of his time.

As a matter of interest, Watt's marineengineer son, also named James (1769-1848), fitted the engine to the first English steamer to leave port in 1817 — its name was the Caledonia.

See Scotland's 'Crown jewels' in 3D

New digital models of the Honours of Scotland released to coincide with last month's presentation to King Charles III at St Giles' Cathedral.

'ewly released 3D digital models of the Crown of Scotland, the Sceptre and the Sword of State will allow users to explore and examine the intricate detail of the Honours like never before. As well as offering a unique perspective on the Honours, the models will also be used to aid future conservation work. The Honours were digitally captured through a process of photogrammetry, where hundreds of overlapping highresolution photographs are taken around the objects and then analysed by software to work out their relative position. These aligned photographs are then used to create accurate photorealistic models of the objects.

On 5 July, the Honours were formally presented to King Charles III at the National Service of Thanksgiving and Dedication which took place at St Giles' Cathedral in Edinburgh. The blade of the Sword of State is in a very fragile condition, having been broken and repaired in the past, likely around the time the Honours were hidden from Cromwell. In order to protect this historic object, it has been retired from use some years ago with consent of the monarch. The Lord Lyon has commissioned a new sword, The Elizabeth Sword to be made for ceremonial purposes and Historic Environment Scotland (HES) have agreed to care for this new commission.

Immense significance

The Honours of Scotland are objects of immense significance and have been present at many of the major royal ceremonial events over the past five centuries. Their centrepiece is the Crown of Scotland, crafted of gold and silver and laden with 94 pearls and 43 gemstones including diamonds, garnets and amethysts. James V had the Crown made in 1540, likely in part from the earlier Scottish Crown which had been damaged, and first wore it at the coronation of Mary of Guise that same year.

The Sceptre is thought to have been a gift to James IV from Pope Alexander VI in 1494. This ceremonial staff is an example of High Renaissance Italian craftsmanship, with the finial formed from a globe of polished rock crystal and held up by stylised dolphins and three figures depicting St Andrew, St James and the Virgin Mary. On top of the crystal globe sits a gold orb, capped with a single large pearl.

The Sword of State was gifted to James IV by Pope Julius II in 1507 and represents an exceptionally high quality of decoration. The arms of Pope Julius were used as the theme for the Sword handle design, with oak trees and acorns symbolising the risen Christ and dolphins signifying Christ's Church.

The blade of the Sword is in a very fragile condition and was retired from use some years ago with consent of the monarch.

Kathy Richmond, Head of Collections and Applied Conservation at HES, said: "Using digital technology in this way can help enhance how we enjoy, understand and protect the precious objects of our past."

Turbulent history

The Honours of Scotland have had a turbulent history. Edward I had removed the former Honours of Scotland along with the Stone of Destiny in 1296, with only the Stone surviving. The Honours seen today were pursued by Cromwellian forces, who destroyed the English Crown Jewels. In 1650 they were removed for safekeeping ahead of Oliver Cromwell's siege of Edinburgh Castle. Unable to be returned to Edinburgh Castle following the Scottish coronation of King Charles II in 1651, the Honours were taken to Dunnottar Castle before being smuggled out during a siege and hidden at Kinneff Kirk. Only with the restoration of King Charles II to the throne could they return to Edinburgh Castle and be used for ceremonial openings of Parliament until 1707.

With the Parliamentary Union of 1707, the Honours were locked away in the Crown Room at the Castle, as they were no longer needed for ceremonial events. They remained there until 1818 when Walter Scott and others, with a royal warrant from the Prince Regent (who would become George IV), broke into the Crown Room, opened the Crown Chest and there rediscovered the Honours.

The Elizabeth Sword

- Is a new sword of state to be used in Coronation service.
- · Named after the late Queen Elizabeth II, the ceremonial sword was presented to the King along with the Crown and Sceptre which are part of the Honours of Scotland - Scotland's Crown Jewels - during the National Service of Thanksgiving and Dedication at St Giles Cathedral on Wednesday 5 July.
- · Following the service, the sword and Honours were returned to the care of Historic Environment Scotland.
- · Designed by former Ormond Pursuivant of Arms Mark Dennis and worked on by a number of expert Scottish craftspeople, the sword features a pommel of Lewisian gneiss, and a scabbard wrought from Perthshire oak.
- · The sword will be used on ceremonial occasions in place of the current sword, gifted to James IV by Pope Julius in 1507, which can no longer be used due to its fragile condition.

The Honours of Scotland

- · The Honours of Scotland, comprising the Crown of Scotland, the Sceptre, and the Sword of State, are the oldest Crown jewels in Britain.
- The Honours of Scotland are owned by the Crown, i.e. King Charles III, and are on loan from the Commissioners for the Safeguarding of the Regalia, who are appointed by Royal Warrant. HES acts on their behalf to care for the Honours of Scotland and the Stone of Destiny.
- The Honours were formally presented to Queen Elizabeth at the last National Service of Thanksgiving which took place in 1953 at the High Kirk of St Giles' in Edinburgh, before being returned to their custodians. The National Service of Thanksgiving Dedication on 5 July 2023 repeated this tradition.
- The Honours of Scotland were escorted from Edinburgh Castle to St Giles' Cathedral by The King's Body Guard for Scotland, the Royal Company of Archers and a Guard of Honour formed by contingents of the Navy, Army and Royal Air Force. The Stone of Destiny was placed in St Giles' in advance of the Service in a non-public move.

Following the service, the Honours returned to display alongside the Stone of Destiny in the Crown Room at Edinburgh Castle.

IN THE SCOTTISH KITCHEN

Oatcakes

Ingredients:

175g/6 oz. medium oatmeal 50g/2 oz. fine or pinhead oatmeal ½ teaspoonful of salt ½ teaspoonful of baking powder 25g/1 oz. butter, melted 50-75ml/2-3 fl. oz. boiling water

Method:

Pre-heat the oven to 325F, 170C, Gas Mark 3. Place all the dry ingredients in a bowl and stir. Pour in the melted butter and enough boiling water to form a fairly stiff dough. Sprinkle some fine or medium oatmeal over a board and gently roll out the mixture into a thin circle, about 23 to 25 cm (9 to 10 in.) in diameter. Cut into 8 wedges and carefully transfer to a buttered baking tray. Bake in the oven for about 20 minutes, until just firm. Carefully transfer to a wire rack to cool.

Honeyed Shetland Lamb

Ingredients:

1 leg lamb

4 to 6 sprigs fresh thyme

2 tablespoonfuls clear honey

15g/ 1/2 oz. butter

1 glassful red wine

Salt and freshly-ground black pepper, to taste Knobs of butter

To Serve: vegetables of your choice

To Garnish: sprigs of fresh thyme, optional

Method:

Pre-heat the oven to 400F/200C, Gas Mark 6. Smear the lamb with butter and place in a roasting tin. Spoon over the honey and add the herbs and wine. Season to taste. Place in the oven and roast for 1 hour 10 minutes, then remove from the oven. Pour the juices into a shallow, heavy-based saucepan and reduce by half. Stir in a little butter and bubble until glossy. Carve the meat and serve with the juices poured over it. Accompany with vegetables of your choice, and garnish, if liked, with thyme.

Fish in oats with potato salad

Ingredients:

For the potato salad:

200g/7oz. small new potatoes 50g/2oz. kale, very coarsely chopped 1/4 cucumber, cut in half lengthways, seeds scooped out with a spoon, thickly sliced 1-2 spring onions, trimmed and sliced

For the dressing:

1 tbsp. white balsamic vinegar 2 tbsp. cold-pressed rapeseed oil squeeze lemon juice salt and freshly ground black pepper

For the fish:

2 handfuls 'medium' oatmeal salt and freshly ground black pepper 6 fish fillets, scales and central line of bones removed dollop mustard 30g/1¼ oz. butter splash rapeseed oil lemon wedges, to serve

Method:

For the potato salad, boil the new potatoes in a large saucepan of salted water until tender (about 12 minutes). Add the kale and cucumber to the pan three minutes before the potatoes are ready and boil until all of the ingredients are tender. Drain well and set aside. For the dressing, whisk together the vinegar, rapeseed oil and lemon juice in a jug until well combined. Season, to taste, with salt and freshly ground black pepper. Set aside. For the herring, sprinkle the oatmeal onto a plate and season with salt and freshly ground black pepper. Brush both sides of each herring fillet with a little of the mustard, then roll in the seasoned oatmeal until completely covered. Heat the butter and the oil in a large, heavy-based frying pan over a medium heat. Add the coated herring fillets to the pan, skin-side up (do this in batches if necessary). Gently press down on each of the herring fillets using a fish slice so that they stay flat. Fry for 1-2 minutes, or until the oats are goldenbrown, then turn over and continue to fry on the other side for a further 1-2 minutes, or until the herrings are cooked through and the oats are golden-brown. Remove the herring fillets from the pan using a slotted spoon and set aside to drain on kitchen paper. Place the boiled potatoes, kale and cucumber into a serving bowl, stir in the spring onions, and drizzle over the dressing. Mix well and season, to taste, with salt and freshly ground black pepper. To serve, divide the herring equally between two serving plates. Spoon the potato salad alongside and serve with a wedge of lemon.

Clapshot

Ingredients:

500g/1lb.2 oz. potatoes, peeled and cut up 500g/1 lb.2 oz. turnip, peeled and cut up 50g/2oz. butter or dripping 1-2 tablespoonfuls chives, chopped Salt and freshly-ground black pepper, to taste

Put the vegetables in a pan of cold salted water, then cover and bring to the boil. Simmer for 15 to 20 minutes, depending on the size, until tender, then drain. Return them to the pan then cover and shake the pan over a very low heat to dry them off completely. Remember, turnips are rather watery, so unless you dry them off well the mixture will end up sloppy. Mash the vegetables with the butter or dripping, then add the salt and pepper to taste, and stir in the chives. Serve piping hot. Serves 4-6.

Tablet

Ingredients:

125g/41/2 oz. unsalted butter 1kg/2 1/4 lb. golden granulated sugar 300ml/10 fl. oz. full-fat milk 200g/7 oz. tin of condensed milk 1 teaspoonful pure vanilla essence

Method:

Place the butter in a large heavy-based saucepan (only a reliable pan should be used, otherwise the tablet mixture will stick) and melt it over a low heat. Add the sugar, milk and salt and heat gently until the sugar has dissolved, stirring occasionally. Bring to the boil and simmer over a fairly high heat for 9 to 10 minutes, stirring often (and making sure you get into all the corners with your wooden spoon). Add the condensed milk and stir well, then simmer for 8 to 10 minutes, stirring constantly. The mixture should bubble but not too fiercely. After 8 minutes test if it is ready. It should have reached the "soft ball" stage, which means that when you drop a little of the mixture into a cup of very cold water, it will form a soft ball that you can pick up between your fingers. On a sugar thermometer it should reach 115C/240F Remove from the heat at once and add the vanilla (or other flavourings). Using an electric hand-held beater, beat at a medium speed for 4 to $5\,\mathrm{minutes},$ just until you feel the mixture begin to stiffen a little and become ever so slightly grainy. You can of course do this by hand, but it will take at least 10 minutes and it is hard work! Pour immediately into a buttered 23 by 33 cm (9 by 13 in.) Swiss roll tin and leave to cool. Mark into squares or oblongs when it is almost cold. When completely cold, remove and store in an airtight tin or wrap the pieces individually in waxed paper. Makes 16 to 20 bars.

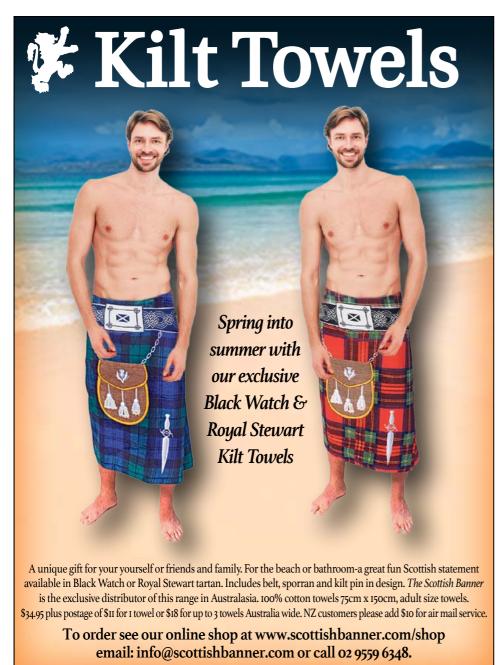

Flambéed raspberries

Ingredients:

85g/3oz. raspberries 40ml/11/2fl oz. whisky 30g/1oz flaked almonds, toasted icing sugar, to dust

Method:

Place the raspberries into a frying pan and cook over a gentle heat on a gas hob for 2-3 minutes. Add the whisky and very carefully tip the pan slightly to catch the flame and ignite the whisky. Flambé the raspberries for one minute. To serve, pour the raspberries into a serving bowl, sprinkle over the flaked almonds and dust with icing sugar.

Head to Scotland for an adventure this summer cotland benefits from beautiful scenery, many hills and mountains to explore, as well as stunning wildlife and spectacular walking routes and trails. With the arrival of summer, and plenty of sunshine in Scotland, visitors need not look far for their next adventure.

Discovering lost worlds.....

Burn o'Vat, Aberdeenshire – Visitors can climb through the rock (approach with care) and witness this remarkable natural feature in the landscape. As the area warmed around it 14,000 years ago, the ice sheet began to melt, resulting in a torrent of meltwater that carried with it debris previously caught up in the glacial ice. It is thought that a rock became lodged in a small hollow on the river bed, causing the meltwater to flow around it in a spiralling motion. This caused the bed underneath the rock to erode over a long period of time. Quite the spectacle! (Free to visit).

Alternatively, experience Fort William with Vertical Descents. As the Outdoor Capital of the UK, Fort William offers some of the best outdoor experiences possible. Its towering mountains, deep glens and fast flowing waterfalls make it the perfect place to try canyoning (prices vary).

Finally, visit Staffa by boat and see Fingal's Cave. This little island (½ mile long and ¼ mile wide) off the west coast of Scotland looks like it may be from a different planet. Its hexagonal columns were formed millions of years ago by volcanic eruptions and a vast blanket of lava that spread into the Atlantic Ocean. Years of waves crashing against these columns created the magnificent Fingal's Cave. (Staffa Tours depart Iona and Fionnphort on the Isle of Mull; Priced at £70 per person for a 6 hour trip).

Taking to the ropes....

Hike to the Steall Waterfall via a wire rope bridge. The fabulous Steall waterfalls are featured in the movie Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire (2005) and can be reached via a half hour or so hike from the Nevis Gorge car park. The hike includes rocky areas and negotiating carefully the single foot wire rope bridge when crossing the river. There is a clear, well-walked path throughout, but it is very rough and rocky with steep drops and good footwear and care is needed, (free to visit).

Have fun at Go Ape; With courses designed to be accessible for mixed abilities and age groups, Go Ape offers a fun and challenging day out. Go Ape Aberfoyle is home to Scotland's longest dual zip wires, whilst Go Ape, Glentress Forest, Peebles also boasts massive solo zips over a lake, all whist soaring 50m above the valley below. Go Ape Dalkeith, Edinburgh is the company's newest location and the only one in Scotland to feature activities for children under 10. (Prices vary).

"Get your motor running...."

The Experience Tour – which gives people the chance to ride a new model Harley-Davidson motorbike – is happening across the summer throughout the UK at some of the most popular biker locations across the country including this one in Crianlarich in Loch Lomond and the Trossachs National Park. Those who are new to the world of Harley-Davidson and would like to experience this pioneering two-wheel transportation brand can book their place via the dedicated webpage (price on request; once booked, a full, valid motorcycle licence, helmet and riding gear are required in order to take part).

For anyone who has ever imagined exploring Scotland by motorbike, but unsure how to go about it, Bikerbnb Adventures can help. Their dedicated team of experts can plan a road trip including a guided motorcycle experience that covers roughly 1,000 miles across the north of Scotland over five days. The Highland Scramble, a curated events series, features not only the best riding that Scotland has to offer, but also the best food, drink and motorcycle-friendly accommodation.

Where to see reptiles in Scotland 'Meet' the reptiles at Edinburgh Zoo; these include the corn snakes. Corn snakes are slender, orange or brown-yellow snakes with a pattern of large red blotches outlined in black down their backs. They are native to the eastern United States but are most abundant in Florida. Also see the milk snake; Brightly coloured and strikingly patterned, milk snakes are nonvenomous snakes found throughout North and South America and Canada. They are often confused with dangerous copperheads or coral snakes, but milk snakes pose no threat to humans.

Handling sessions are only £1.25 per person (under 3's are free), with sessions lasting approximately 20-30 minutes. Tickets are only available to purchase on the day of your visit at Amazonia's reception, on a first come, first serve basis per session, due to a limited capacity in the room (20 visitors per session), so please enquire and book on arrival.

Discovering history

Rosslyn Chapel in Midlothian has been linked to everything from the Knights Templar to the lost ark of the covenant and the Holy Grail.

Doune Castle, near Stirling, is famously where Monty Python and the Holy Grail (1975) was filmed and is a favourite with movie fans and history buffs alike.

Visit Kelvingrove Art Gallery & Museum, Glasgow. Explore 22 galleries and discover everything from art to animals, Ancient Egypt to Charles Rennie Mackintosh and so much more (free to visit).

Explore Scotland's ancient capital and newest city, Dunfermline. The city is strongly associated with King Malcolm III "Canmore" and his queen Saint Margaret, and during their reign, the town developed as a centre of political power, becoming an important place of residence for Scottish Royalty.

Scotland is home to many historic landmarks from the Jarlshof Prehistoric and Norse Settlement in Shetland to Abbotsford in the Scottish Borders. Scotland is also home to 13 UNESCO World Heritage designations and has the world's first UNESCO Trail. Visitors planning a trip can check out Scotland's accessible castles and battlefields at Euan's Guide, explore the many wonderful sites of Historical Environment Scotland, as well as planning an historical trip with the Natural Trust for Scotland.

Braving the rapids

Check out River Wild Adventures in Newtonmore for white-knuckle adventures (along with the safety instruction and proper gear). In addition, Nae Limits in Perthshire has a range of white water rafting options for beginners and extreme thrill seekers alike and ACE Adventures offers white water rafting trips in various locations, including on the rivers Findhorn, Tay and Tummel.

Join a dig

Scotland is a great place to get lost in archaeological facts and findings.
Visitors can even give up some of their holiday time to join a dig. Dig It! in Scotland has many events for all abilities. For example, in Orkney, one of the UHI Archaeology Institute's flagship excavations began at South Ronaldsay in 2006, revealing a large Iron Age broch (c100BC-AD200) and structures dating from the Iron Age through to the Norse period.

During the excavation period, the site will be open to the public on weekdays from 10am until 4pm. For more information, and for details of other digs, go to www.digitscotland.com/archaeological-digs-in-scotland-2023-edition

Waypoints: My Scottish Journey

In his first full autobiography the award-winning actor and bestselling author of Clanlands, Sam Heughan, sets out along the West Highland Way to explore his life and reflect on the personal waypoints that define him.

In this journey of self-discovery, Sam Heughan sets out along the West Highland Way to explore his heritage and reflect on the personal waypoints that define him. The result is a love letter to the wild Scottish landscape that means so much to Sam, and a charming, funny, wise and searching insight to the world through his eyes. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

Poacher's Pilgrimage The islands of Scotland's Outer Hebrides boast some of the most spectacular scenery in the world. They also feature an astonishing range of mysterious structures — stone circles, beehive dwellings, holy wells and 'temples' from the Celtic and prehistoric eras. Alastair McIntosh returned to the islands of his childhood to explore the meaning of these places. This book is a record of his pilgrimage- across a physical landscape and into a spiritual one. As he endured some of the toughest terrain in Britain, he met with the healing power of the land and its communities. Here he reflects on an extraordinary place and on the people he encountered along the way. Price: $34.95 Plus postage

Tiel's Saga: Scottish Lore, Norse Roots

For 7 centuries, Vikings raided & settled the coast of Scotland and the Hebrides Islands. During that time, the Norsemen and Gaels formed a unique culture as they intermarried & shared belief systems, folklore, and traditions. In this groundbreaking work, the author looks at five pieces of Scottish folklore and illuminates the influence of Norse myths in each. The book reveals the crossovers in mythology. The Picts: A History
This is a new edition of this popular history of the Picts, an ancient nation who ruled most of northern and eastern Scotland during the Dark Ages. Despite their historical importance, they remain shrouded in myth and misconception. Absorbed by the kingdom of the Scots in the 9th century, they lost their unique identity, their language and their vibrant artistic culture. It pieces together the evidence to tell the story of this mysterious people from their emergence in Roman times to their eventual disappearance. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

Scotland's most famous document, signed on 6 April, 1320, is one of the most remarkable documents to have been produced in medieval Europe. Signed by 51 Scottish nobles, it confirms Scotland's status as an independent sovereign state with the right to use military action if unjustly attacked. Quoted by many, understood by few, its historical significance has now almost been overtaken by its mythic status.. This is the first book-length study to examine the origins & ideas upon which it drew, while tracing the rise of its mythic status in Scotland.

The Finest Road in the World Trains and stagecoaches stuck in the snow, wild storms driving sailing ships off course, traffic pile-ups on so-called 'killer' highways – stories abound about the horrors of travel in the Highlands & Islands, and have done for as far as the records go back. James Miller tells the dramatic and sometimes surprisingly humorous story of travel and transport in the Highlands. This book will appeal to all are interested in how changing modes of transport have affected the ways of life in the Highlands and remain crucial to the modern life and the future of the region. Scottish Customs

This book introduces hundreds of Scottish customs associated with a huge range of topics. As well as customs associated with key events of our lives, from birth to death, it also includes customs associated with the world of work, food and drink, health, animals and nature. Extracts from written works through the ages bring these customs to life and show how important they have been in the story of Scotland for thousands of years.

Tales for Twilight: Two Hundred Years of Scottish Ghost Stories

This book offers a spine-tingling selection of unnerving tales by writers from James Hogg in the early 18th century to James Robertson, very much alive in the 21st. Scottish authors have proved to be exceptionally good at writing ghost stories. Perhaps it's because of the tradition of oral storytelling that has stretched over centuries. The golden age was during the Victorian and Edwardian period, but the ghost story has continued to evolve and remains popular to this day. Price: $24.95 plus postage

A History of Scotland

Historian Neil Oliver presents a compelling new portrait of Scottish history, peppered with action, high drama and centuries of turbulence that have helped to shape modern Scotland. Along the way, he takes in iconic landmarks and historic architecture; debunks myths surrounding Scotland's famous sons; recalls forgotten battles; charts the growth of patriotism; and explores recent political developments, capturing Scotland's sense of identity and celebrating her place in the wider world. Homecoming: The Scottish Years of Mary, Queen of Scots (Hardback) One of the most famous queens in history, Mary Stuart lived in her homeland for 12 years. This book tells the story of Mary's Scottish years through the often dramatic and atmospheric locations and settings where the events that shaped her life took place and also examines the part Scotland, and its tumultuous court and culture, played in her downfall. Whether or not Mary Stuart emerges blameless or guilty, this evocative retelling she can be seen for who she really was. Price: $ 44.95 Plus postage

Scotland is a land of many languages, the result is an often bewildering series of overlapping layers of placenames, difficult at times to understand and even pronounce. > The King Over the Water: A Complete History of the Jacobites Spanning more than a century, the Jacobite cause is one of the epic stories of history. They may have failed in their aim to restore the house of Stuart to the British throne, but in that failure the Jacobites changed the course of history. Intrigue, espionage, corruption and betrayal, as well as constancy to the cause in the face of terrible risks are all ingredients of this extraordinary tale. Few novels can boast such a colourful cast of characters, not to mention one of the most well-known historical figures of all time and brings them to life in this vivid, sweeping narrative, with insight & analysis. Islands of the Evening 14 centuries ago, Irish saints journeyed to the Hebrides and Scotland's Atlantic 14 centuries ago, Irish shore. They sought spiritual solitude in remote places, but their mission was also to spread the word of God to the peoples of Scotland. Columba was the most famous of these pioneers, but the many others are now largely forgotten. Alistair Moffat sets off in search of these elusive figures. As he follows in their footsteps, he finds their traces not so much in tangible remains as in the spirit and memory of the places that lay at the very edge of their world. Price:$24.95 Plus postage

Pipers: A Guide to the Players and Music of the Highland Bagpipe

Pipers takes the reader inside the world of the performer community of Scottish piping, introducing the instrument itself and the various different repertories. It also discusses piping techniques as well as information on some of the great piping dynasties and individual pipers. Dr Willie Donaldson shows how 'traditional music' is the creation of gifted individuals operating in a sophisticated and vigorously ongoing enterprise, their story offers fascinating insights into the whole traditional music and song repertoire of Scotland. The Makers of Scotland: Picts, Romans, Gaels and Vikings During the 1st millennium AD the most northerly part of Britain evolved into the country known as Scotland. The transition was a long process of social & political change driven by the ambitions of warlords. At first these men were tribal chiefs, Roman generals or rulers of small kingdoms. Later the initiative was seized by dynamic warrior-kings who campaigned far beyond their own borders. Armies of Picts, Scots, Vikings, Britons and Anglo-Saxons fought each other for supremacy. Britain's DNA Journey: Our Remarkable Genetic Story In an epic narrative, Moffat writes an entirely new history of Britain. Instead of the usual parade of the usual suspects – kings, queens, saints, warriors and the notorious – this is a people's history, a narrative made from stories only DNA can tell, which offers insights into who we are and where we come from. Based on new research involving the largest sampling of DNA ever made in Britain, itshows the true origins of our island's inhabitants. Price: $24.95 Plus postage

Picts: Scourge of Rome, Rulers of the North The mysterious and enigmatic Picts, who flourished in northern Scotland from c. 300 ADYet historical sources are limited and there are few books on the Picts, and non-that reflect the significant advances in our knowledge that have been made in the last ten years. This book redresses that balance. As well as including an historical overview of the Picts from the late Roman sources to the tenth century, it also covers kingship and elite culture, everyday life, burial traditions, pagan and Christian belief, art and crafting, and the end of Pictland during the Viking Price: $49.95 Plus postage

The Lowland Clearances: Scotland's Silent Revolution 1760 - 1830

The Highland Clearances are a well-documented episode in Scotland's past but they were not unique. The process began in the Scottish Lowlands nearly a century before, when tens of thousands of people significantly more than were later exiled form the Highlands. These Clearances shaped the appearance of the Scottish landscape as it is today as they swept aside a traditional way of life. Based on pioneering historical research, this book tells the story of the Lowland Clearances, establishing them as a wider part of the process of Clearance which affected the whole country and changed the face of Scotland forever.

The Highland Clearances

The Highland Clearances stands out as one of the most emotive chapters in the history of Scotland. This book traces the origins of the Clearances from the eighteenth century to their culmination in the crofting legislation of the 1880s. In considering both the terrible suffering of the Highland people as well as the stark choices that faced landowners during a period of rapid economic change, it shows how the Clearances were one of many 'attempted' solutions to the problem of how to maintain a population on marginal and infertile land. This book offers a balanced analysis of events which created a errible scar on the Highland and Gaelic imagination. Price: $29.95 Plus postage

Written both as a self-tuition course for beginners and also for use within the classroom. You may want to learn Gaelic because of a general interest in Celtic or Scottish history and culture, or because it was the everyday language of your ancestors. All over the world people associate the bagpipes with Scotland. In this informative and entertaining book Stuart McHardy introduces Scotland's national instrument – its history, development and repertoire – and examines the part that the piper himself has played in Highland and Lowland society over the centuries. Whether dealing with great bravery or contemptible jealousy, the supernatural or the mundane, these stories reflect the central role that the bagpipes have played, and continue to play, in Scottish traditional culture.

The Perfect Sword:Forging the Dark Ages In 2000, archaeologist Paul Gething rediscovered a sword. This is the story of that sword: how and why it was made, who made it and what it meant to the warriors and kings who wielded it for three centuries. It is also the story of the archaeologists and swordsmiths who found, studied and attempted to recreate the sword using only the materials and technologies available to the smith who first made it. The result is a remarkable journey into the life and items of a seminal but little documented period of history when the foundations for what would become England, Wales and Scotland were laid. Beaches Across Scotland Shore to Impress

From hidden coves to surfers' paradises, taking in both city beaches and remote shores which seem to stretch for miles, a break on Scotland's coasts offers something for everyone. Here you will find a roundup of top beach locations for those looking to have a picturesque picnic, a family day out, enjoy a spot of wildlife watching or sit back and enjoy an epic sunset.

Top beaches for a family day out

Urban beach – Edinburgh,
Portobello Beach: With its waters granted designated bathing water status from SEPA (Scottish Environment Protection Agency), and its low tide, Portobello Beach is the perfect place for beginners to enjoy the wonders of wild swimming. Families can enjoy sandy shores, a promenade with cafes and ice cream shops.

Milarrochy bay, Loch Lomond: This stunning stretch of water has a sandy bay providing great access to the water. Surrounded by Munros and walking trails, and located close to the town of Balmaha, a refreshing swim is the perfect way to cool off after a day of exploring. Families can enjoy the Loch Lomond Faerie Trail at Luss on Loch Lomondside, before visiting the new Faerie Tale Farm to meet alpacas, donkeys, sheep, highland cows and goats.

Nairn Beach, The Highlands:
This superb sandy beach in the middle of Nairn is a fantastic attraction and popular with families. Its coastline is home to a resident school of dolphins and there is also a great range of coastal walks in either direction with a stunning nature reserve at Kingsteps in the east and a viewpoint to the west. For those looking to experience adventure, the Bowhunter
Team offer the opportunity to learn Woodland Archery, as well as Axe Throwing, Bushcraft, and the exhilarating game of Combat Archery.
For more information on visiting Nairn, please visit: www.nairnscotland.co.uk

Top beaches to watch the sunset

Gruinard Bay, Ross-Shire: Nestled on the west coast of Scotland, Gruinard Bay is a hidden gem renowned for its mesmerizing sunsets. The expansive sandy beach offers unobstructed views of the horizon, allowing sunset-spotters to witness the gradual fading of daylight and the emergence of a celestial masterpiece.

Ninian's Isle, Shetland: St. Ninian's Isle is connected to the mainland by a narrow strip of sand, creating a unique setting for sunset enthusiasts. As the sun sets over the North Sea, the surrounding landscapes and the ancient chapel on the isle are bathed in a warm golden light.

Tentsmuir Sands, Fife: Exploring the winding pathways that meander through the dunes is rewarded with panoramic views of the sunset over the North Sea and the surrounding coastal woodland. Tentsmuir Sands is a haven for wildlife, so keep an eye out for rare bird species and other fascinating creatures that call this dune-filled landscape home.

Top spots for wildlife enthusiasts

Isle of Coll, Inner Hebrides: With its pristine beaches and crystalclear waters, this island offers an unparalleled opportunity to explore its underwater wonders. Discover thriving kelp forests, encounter curious seals, and witness the vibrant array of fish that call these waters home. The Isle of Coll's untouched beauty and diverse marine ecosystem make it a must-visit snorkelling destination. These coastal waters also offer a unique opportunity to witness one of nature's gentle giantsthe basking shark. With its enormous size and placid nature. Join Basking Shark Scotland and embark on an extraordinary adventure to experience the awe-inspiring presence of basking sharks in the waters of Scotland.

Isle of Arran, West Coast of Scotland: Arran's captivating beaches offer a gateway to the past, inviting fossil hunting enthusiasts and shell collectors to embark on an extraordinary journey through time. Absorb island life and book in to Lochranza Youth Hostel, from £14 per person per night and be sure to stop by The COAST Discovery Centre - Scotland's first Marine Protected Area (MPA) visitor centre, and the UK's first community-led MPA visitor centre. Learn about the island's marine biodiversity and the conservation efforts - located right on the sea front in Lamlash Bay, it is fully accessible and open seven days a week, rain or shine.

Lunan Bay, Angus: A hidden gem known for its pristine sandy beach and breath-taking coastal scenery. Take time to visit Montrose Basin Visitor Centre, Scottish Wildlife Trust. Montrose Basin is the enclosed estuary of the South Esk River. The reserve includes a 4-star visitor centre along with four remote bird hides. Covering 750 hectares, Montrose Basin is home to over 80,000 migratory birds including pink-footed geese, common terns, knot and kingfisher.

Top beaches for a picturesque picnic

Prince's Beach, Eriskay, Outer Hebrides: One of Scotland's most historic beaches, it's said to be where Bonnie Prince Charlie first set foot on Scottish soil. Marvel at this beautiful beach and embark on a leisurely coastal walk, tracing the rugged cliffs and taking in the dramatic coastal views that stretch as far as the eye can see.

Balephuil Bay, Tiree: Known as the 'Hawaii of the North', Tiree provides a tranquil paradise for holidaymakers to relax and unwind. With white-shell beaches and turquoise waters, Balephuil Bay is the perfect place for a swim and a firm favourite for surfers, thanks to the warm waters brought in by the Gulf Stream.

Loch Goilhead, Argyll: Situated amidst the stunning scenery of mountains and forests, the highlight of this destination is undoubtedly its pristine beach. Visitors flock to Loch Goilhead to soak up the sun, bask in the serenity, and indulge in a plethora of exciting activities.

Scotland has a wealth of beaches and glacial activity has created an incredibly intricate Scottish coastline, which includes around 800 islands mostly off the west and north coasts. At about 18,000km long, Scotland's coastline would stretch from Scotland to Australia were all of its curves and turns straightened out. Have you got a favourite Scottish beach? Share your story with us by email, post, social media.

Piping Live! Big Band returns for 2023

he Piping Live! Big Band will return for its sixth showcase at this year's festival, as pipers of all ages and abilities are invited to take part in the mass participation event. On Monday 14th August around 150 pipers will gather, ranging from young learners playing their chanters to seasoned professionals with years of piping experience. The bespoke Big Band will walk the streets of Glasgow's West End for the first time this year, as it performs a repertoire of tunes that everyone can play. For this year, due to the usual end-point of George Square being unavailable, there will be a change from the usual city centre route, with the procession starting at Mansfield Park in Partick at midday, parading down Dumbarton Road and Argyle Street before culminating at the concourse outside Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum.

The Piping Live! Big Band is open to anyone who plays a practice chanter, bagpipes, snare, bass or tenor drum, or is a drum major. All ages are welcome, with past events welcoming people aged 8-86. Players can sign up to be part of the Piping Live! Big Band at www.pipinglive.co.uk.

Musicians coming from far and wide
The Big Band is a way of bringing together pipers who are not otherwise taking part in the festival together, allowing them to be a part of the prestigious Piping Live! line-up. Leading the parade once again this year will be Piping Live!
Artistic Director and the Director of Piping at the National Piping Centre, Finlay MacDonald, as well as some of the National Piping Centre's world-renowned teaching team.

Finlay MacDonald said: "We're so excited to bring the Piping Live! Big Band to Glasgow's West End this year. It's always such a treat to see so many pipers and drummers of all ages and abilities come together to perform, filling the streets with music. We have musicians coming from far and wide, and it's just wonderful to see everyone united by their love of Scottish music. We're raising money for a fantastic cause (Versus Arthritis) that's close to some of our piper's hearts so I'm very proud to be leading the band once again this year."

Piping Live! 2023 returns to Glasgow this month. The world's biggest piping festival annually attracts over 30,000 attendees to Glasgow and this year the Piping Live! team hopes to bring in even more visitors, as it celebrates two decades as a cornerstone on the Scottish cultural calendar. Tickets are on sale now. Live streaming will return to Piping Live!, with an exciting programme of live and premiered events and concerts to be announced.

Piping Live! returns for 2023 with a nineday festival, from Saturday 12th - Sunday 20th August. The annual festival will showcase a world-renowned programme of events. Full detail sand tickets for Piping Live! are available at: www.pipinglive.co.uk.
